Irish Politics—The Nationalists in Parliament—A Troublesome Neighbor—A Legislator's Privileges—The Military Manœuvres—The Money Market.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 22.

Another "Nationalist" or "Home Rule" man has been returned to the House of Commons by an Irish constituency. This time it is Mr. BUTT, who has been elected by Limerick—O'CONNELL's borough in former days. This makes the third of this party now in Parliament the other two being Mr. MARTIN and Mr. SHERIDAN. Mr. BUTT is called by his friends and admirers the Father of the Home Rule movement, but he is extremely careful not to say exactly what he does or does not mean by that simple sounding but essentially vague and ambiguous term. He declares that no man has a greater respect for the Crown, and that he would not for worlds disturb the prerogatives of the Sovereign or the principles of the Constitution. He proposes an Irish Parliament, distinct from the British one, but it is quite clear that if Home Rule means anything it must mean the establishment of Ireland as an independent State, with an Executive and not only a domestic policy but a foreign policy of its own. It would in many ways be a great relief to this country to be rid of the troublesome and expensive sister Island. It is favored by exceptionally light taxation, and all items of grants of public money, which nobody would ever think of asking for England or Scotland, and which, if they were asked for, would certainly not be granted, are conceded to Ireland without any demur. This is done, not altogether out of love for the Irish, but in a great measure, because the English conscience has not been at ease about that people. No doubt they have been very ill-used in times past, but for the last half-century the course of British legislation has been, as far as they are concerned, a series of apologies and compensations of a very handsome and generous kind. It may be said that justice is distinct from generosity, and that there is nothing handsome in merely doing one's duty. But it really does require a generous spirit to confess a fault and offer practical amends in the face of such perverse and ungrateful behavior as that of the Irish toward the Imperial Government. A change is now imminent in England's relations with that country, and, though, of course, the least said is, in such a case, the soonest mended, the Irish will soon discover to their cost that England, having cleared her conscience, is not disposed to be trifled with any longer. There are some small matters of local administration, such as passing bills for railways and similar works, which there can be no objection to transfer from London to Dublin, if the Irish really desire it. But the idea of allowing the Irish in Ireland to fight out all questions among themselves, apart from the rest of the United Kingdom, is too preposterous even for discussion. And for two very obvious reasons. In the first place the people of Ireland do not all live in that country. Irishmen are citizens of the Empire, and are scattered over England and Scotland in great numbers. The circumstance that they do not actually inhabit their native country at a particular moment ought not to exclude them from all voice in the settlement of its affairs. And in the second place, it is quite certain that if Ireland were cast adrift in this manner, and left to work out its own government entirely by itself, the result would be immediate civil war of the direst and most desperate kind. For the moment it happens that the various parties in Ireland are all inspired with the idea that there is more to be got out of the British Cabinet and Parliament by bluster and bragging than by any other means, and for this theory there is unfortunately some warrant in England's past dealings with that country. But the spirit of active and genuine hostility to the Imperial Government is confined exclusively to the Fenians and more advanced Nationalists, who are only Fenians under a new name. The other parties are more bitterly and intensely hostile to each other than to the Government. The Orangemen would like nothing better than to be let loose upon the priests, and the priests are now pretending to sympathize with the Nationalist movement simply for the sake of cutting out the Fenians, whom they know to be no friends of theirs. Moreover, the old thorough going Fenians, such as STEARNS and his American-Irish Colonels, are at daggers-drawn with Mr. BUTT and the Home-rule people, whom they regard as interlopers, coming in at the eleventh hour to reap in safety the advantages for which the real rebels risked their necks. So that if the moderating and controlling influence of the British Parliament, in which, remember, Ireland is fully represented, were withdrawn, there would be nothing but internecine strife and suicidal violence. Mr. BUTT, Mr. MARTIN, and Mr. SHERIDAN are welcome to plead their case before the House of Commons, whose authority they repudiate, but they had better be made to understand at once that there is only one way of accomplishing a repeal of the union, and that is not the way of moral suasion. Mr. BUTT is a clever lawyer, with a fine gift of rolling Irish rhetoric, and a glorious brogue. When I add that he dare not appear to canvass or address the electors for fear of being arrested by his antagonist, he is hopelessly over head and ears in debt, it will be understood that he could not fail to appeal irresistibly to the sympathies of an Irish borough. His son did the honors in his stead, and one or two wild Catholic priests did their best to outbluster the Home-rule orators. Mr. BUTT was returned without opposition, and to the evident disappointment of his supporters. Who really hoped for a fight. There were some three score on at the time, and it is said the usual gentry preferred to attend them rather than run the risk of being bonneted by the heads of Limerick if they started an opposition candidate. Mr. BUTT can now snap his fingers in the faces of his unhappy creditors, for the person of a British legislator cannot be seized except by order of the assembly to which he belongs. Imprisonment for debt has been abolished in England but the Irish law is still as of old.

THE MILITARY MANŒUVRES.

The military manœuvres which have caused so much stir came to an end yesterday with a grand review at Aldershot, in which the whole forty thousand men were brought out together. When I wrote last week, the result of the battle of the Hog's Back was not known in town. The defending army, under Sir HORS GRANT, made only a feint of defending the long chalk ridge called by that name, and, falling back on the other side, lured the invader on under the range of a heavy park of artillery posted on a rocky and inaccessible eminence, surrounded by narrow lanes and inclosed fields in which the enemy was hopelessly entangled, and at the same time pounded fearfully by Sir HORS's guns. So the Duke of CAMBRIDGE, as chief umpire, pronounced the victory to be with the defenders. They did not, however, hold their ground, for the Second Division of the foe had turned their right flank round by Farnham while the First Division assailed them in front. Sunday was a day of rest, and early on Monday morning the British Army, which had fallen back on Chobham Ridges to draw breath, pushed forward again to attack the invaders, but had to yield ground step by step till in the afternoon it halted on Chobham Common, with the enemy within a few miles of it. There was a dashing cavalry charge at the end of the day's fighting, in which the Life Guards, those giants in steel breast-plates, were pitted against the light cavalry, lancers and dragoons, and were utterly discomfitted by the latter. Of course, I need hardly say that this was not a real encounter, and that both sides pulled up in good time without crossing sabres. The judgment of the umpires was given against the "heavies" because of their loose formation and the long gap between the charging party and its supports. In a similar way several bridges were supposed to be blown up, by simply leaving an orderly to intimate the fact. Thereupon the advancing troops had to halt for such time as our umpire decided was necessary to repair the mischief. This is a plan which some day will perhaps be adopted in enlightened warfare. Why shouldn't there be a general convention on behalf of bridges and other public works as well as on behalf of the sick and wounded? On Tuesday the Army of Defense, established in a strong position at Chobham Moor, with an entrenched camp of a very elaborate and impregnable kind to fall back upon in the last resort, stood all day against both divisions of the enemy, and obliged them to abandon the attack as hopeless. After another day's rest the troops marched back, fighting, to Aldershot, and yesterday, as I said, there was a brilliant review. As a series of spectacles nothing could be better than these sham fights, but they were woefully hollow from a military point of view. Large bodies of troops advanced calmly under the most deadly and withering fire, and one of the necessities of the game was that positions had to be surrendered without a struggle, if the attacking party only observed certain formalities. An officer said to me: "I do not see the use of our being taught to do these things, which, if done in a real campaign, would very properly bring us before a Court-martial." There is much truth in this, but at the same time the Generals require a few grand field days like these in order to practise handling large bodies of men. One thing has been made quite clear, and that is, that the English transport and commissariat system is little if any better than in those and Crimean days. Even with towns and railways all round about them, and London itself within two hours' reach, the troops were very irregularly and insufficiently fed. The cost of the three weeks' movements is estimated at three hundred thousand pounds at least—almost another half-penny of income tax.

THE MONEY MARKET.

The operations consequent on the large money transactions between France and Germany have compelled the Bank to raise its rate of discount to three per cent., and this has fostered the commercial and speculating world very much, as it was not expected. There seems to have been a certain degree of artificial inflation on the Stock Exchange, and the check will probably do good. Three per cent. does not impose an oppressive strain on sound business, and it is as well that rash speculations should be nipped in the bud.

THE NEW REPUBLIC.

A Reminiscence of University Days—Poets of Germania in Paris—Labors of the Assembly—A Retrospect—Heroes for Diplomats—"Timothée Trimm"—McMahon's Opinion.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Tuesday, Sept. 19, 1871.

A great many times during the past fifteen or twenty years I have had occasion to regard a rusication of six months, for the crime of "hazing" common to all military schools, as one of the most fortunate circumstances of a rather eventful career. It was a peremptory leave of absence of this sort which led me to spend a semester at the University of Jena, and to learn something of German student life. I recall that brief period now for the purpose of showing a phase of the daily life of Paris, and to speak of one particular student, who was, at that time, considered the brilliant man of the University. Among more than 1,500 H——n was looked upon as a man of most remarkable promise. He was the pride of the Burgkellers, (our section of the Burschenschaft,) and the special aim of the best men among our enemies, the Titones. He was the best singer, the best piano player, the best waltzer, the best schlager, the best beer drinker, and with all these accomplishments—very great ones in students' eyes—he was the quickest hand at everything in the way of work, from Greek verse to a calculation of an eclipse. He graduated with the highest honors; even the Professors had great hope in his future, and we gave him a fête at parting which is even now recounted to Freshmen among the legends of the University. Leaving his black, red and gold band, covered with the records of his duels, to the Society, to be duly preserved at Zeisenheim, H——n went away, carrying the hearts of his friends, a large stock of University love, and the most beautiful scar across his forehead that a student ever had the good fortune to receive. Everybody predicted for him a high name in literature or in the diplomatic world; but years passed, and H——n's name was not seen upon the cover of a book, nor read in the bulletins from Berlin. Two great wars came to make the name and fortune of many, but H——n was not among the number. There was but one inference, for had H——n been alive such talents as his would have made their mark in the world. Three days ago I was strolling up the boulevards, when I stumbled upon two editorial friends from New-Orleans, just in from Germany. Hardly had I left them when my attention was drawn to an enormous porcelain pipe, to which a passive man was attached, and one glance at the scar upon his brow carried me back to the table, and to our student days at Jena. It was indeed H——n, but not the H——n I had expected to meet. It was not without a feeling of resentment—a feeling that he had cleverly swindled us all, that I listened to his story, and learned that H——n had just returned to the French capital to resume his business of letting places, or of selling them by payments of so much a month. But this was not all of the adventure, and we soon learned the danger of using the German tongue in Paris. I have already remarked that a favorite amusement it hunt down German officers, and before we were aware of the fact, a crowd had gathered behind us. Knowing the character of French crowds, when only fifty or one hundred to one, we were justified in fearing a paving-stone in the back, and it was with pleasure, therefore, that we saw two or three gendarmes hurrying down upon us. Fortunately my own passport sufficed to satisfy the officers, who sent the crowd away, by telling them that if they did not know the American language from the Prussian, they'd better go back to school and learn. A few suspicious men in white blouses were not quite satisfied that we were speaking the "American tongue," however, and still hung about the spot, but we chose the better part of valor by making an orderly retreat. We know that Paris is a receptacle for men of all nations and for disappointed ambitions, but who could have imagined that our brilliant H——n would one day be a piano dealer in this great French city.

LABORS OF THE ASSEMBLY.

At length the long session of the National Assembly has come to a close, and we have a breathing spell to think over other interests, and to sum up the work of this important legislative session. So long as its labors were continued new incidents came so thick and fast upon us that we had no time to understand the meaning of the many violent scenes, the days of disorder, the denounced propositions, and the agitation which so profoundly stirred the community at Versailles. Trying to evolve something like reason and a story that could be understood upon your side of the Atlantic, one soon became involved in a hopeless muddle, and gave it up in despair. More than once I have asked a Deputy to explain certain points, and his answers are as vague and mystic as the debate itself. The Paris journals discuss the work, piece by piece, without ever trying to make a connected story; and their appreciations are never clear until several days have elapsed. Looking back upon the course of the Assembly, we find that it has been a really honest and patriotic body; that it has really had the interest of the country at heart, but that it has arrived at all its accomplished acts by the most roundabout course, and through petty scenes and quarrels, which seem like child's play when it is known beforehand just what is to be and will be done. Beginning at Bordeaux, on the 12th of February last, the Assembly continued its work to the 17th of September, spending at least two-thirds of its time in idle discussions, and in quarrels which are limited in advance. It must be remembered that all the serious work is done in committee, and everything is thus secretly arranged, even to the strength of the vote, before it is brought before the public. The Deputies then pose for the country, and raise these intolerable scenes solely for effect, knowing very well that the result has been agreed upon, and that it cannot be changed. The speeches of M. THIERS are not so much intended to influence the Deputies in the Chamber as to control their actions in the committee-rooms; for these public scenes, where insults and injuries are thrown from side to side, make the members exceedingly obstinate when the real work is to be done. Thus far, M. THIERS has been able to carry all of his measures, by a clever management of the parties playing against each other, and he has received but one or two slight checks upon matters of detail. But there is one secret of the Assembly not generally known, and one which makes it almost ridiculous to discuss seriously any of its public acts before the end has been fully reached. This is the secret to which I have already referred, that everything is arranged in advance. By going to the St. Lazare station at the hour of the "Deputies' train," one can nearly always tell when there is to be a day of excitement, and it is not unfrequent for a member to give out tickets to his friends, with the remark, "Don't fail to come to-morrow; I'm going to raise a row on the other side, and M. de —— is to reply to me. LANGLOIS has a point also, and there'll be fun before the thing is over." All this refers to a perfectly arranged plan for creating a scene, and represents a case where both sides of the house are warned; but the more general plan is for one side to come to an agreement for the purpose of taking the other unawares, thus giving an opportunity for spies, traitors and counter-moves, which often make a day in the French Assembly exceedingly lively. M. THIERS is an old fox at this sort of tactics, and he bore with the Chamber until nearly broken down with overwork, when it began to annoy him. It was then that he threatened to resign if that kind of tracasserie was continued, although he had never failed to manage the Chamber at its serious work in the bureaux. He saw, however, that it was weakening his influence, and detracting from his power over the country, and hence determined to put a stop to it by threats of resignation. It makes one almost angry to be continually cheated by this by-play, and to think that so long a session has passed without producing a single great speech, or a single discussion which threw light upon the great questions of the day.

IMPORTANT MEASURES.

Beyond question the great work of this session has been the "Pact of Bordeaux"—for we must consider the treaty of peace as a necessity for any Government—and this compact was very well kept up to the Rivet proposition. That measure would have opened the door to a monarchy but for the patriotic course of the Right in acknowledging the existence of the Republic, and in electing M. THIERS President. Meanwhile the country has had an opportunity of studying that form of government, and of making up its mind; but I fear that the Republicans have been too hasty. Had they left matters as they were for the term of German occupation, there is little doubt that the Republic would have been founded. The other great measures are the payment of the war claims and the freeing of several departments, and the last act of the Assembly in granting a special treaty for the products of Alsace and Lorraine. The other measures, with the exception of the disarmament and disbanding of the National Guard, have been only partially accomplished. The law for the reorganization of the army, for example, is in a very crude state, and left in as bad a condition as it well could be. By declaring itself constituent this Assembly has made itself responsible for all of these acts, and they will furnish work enough for the coming Winter.

HONORS FOR DIPLOMATS.

M. THIERS has been made a Prince, and it is now the turn of the Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH to raise the Comte DE BEUST to an equality with Prince BISMARCK and Prince THIERS. The latter, however, is a Prince of Spain, King AMEDEE having conferred upon him the Cross of the Toison d'or, and made him a Chevalier of the Golden Fleece. This is a distinction of great value on account of its rarity, for, in addition to the high political consideration attached to it, the chevaliers of the Order are entitled to the rank of prince in foreign Courts. This Order was founded by PHILIPPE LE BON, in 1429, for the benefit of his thirty sons, and it is among the few Orders which have been kept exclusive. The Frenchmen who possess the collar, the distinctive sign of the Chevalier, are the Duc de Nemours, the Duc de Montpensier, the Duc d'Aumale, the Prince de Joinville, the Emperor Napoleon and his son, and M. Guizot, the latter receiving it for his part in the Spanish marriages. In Europe, where such decorations are highly valued, it is of no small consequence to Prince THIERS that he can wear on State occasions the collar of the Toison-d'or.

"TIMOTHEE TRIMM."

In a previous letter I spoke of a report concerning the death of "Timothée Trimm," one of the eccentric and prolific writers for the Paris Press, who turn out column after column day day after day for three or four different journals. The industry of this writer is something prodigious, yet every day he finds time to walk upon the Boulevards and to make his party of dominoes at a café. At the same time he turns out a book now and then, or writes an address for the opening of some theatre. Generally these writers receive five sous a line for their copy, and this being about one cent a word, their object is to get out as many words as possible, without particular regard to the sense. "Timothée Trimm" has just read an address to open a piece at the Gymnase, and it appears that the discourse was as dry and eccentric as the famous writer himself. Before it was half over the audience was restless and gaping, and at last there were evident signs that even "Timothée Trimm" would be hissed if he continued to read any more of his manuscript at five sous a line. The bonhomie of the man alone prevented an outburst. "Don't get impatient," he he said holding up his notes, "I am very near the end. See here, I've only that and two notes upon the table, and you can be sure that after I've read that I shall not have another word to say." The audience laughed good naturedly, and Timothée read on. "This is the last one," he said, showing the final page with a manner that seemed to say that he was better pleased than the audience. It is very clear that "Timothée" will never make his fortune as an orator, but as a writer he is adored by the readers of the Petit Journal, although he is too weak for our side of the water.

MACMAHON'S OPINIONS.

The testimony of Marshal MACMAHON has created not a little excitement in this city, and the General has frequently been interviewed upon the subject. One phrase of his has been generally quoted, although it amounts to little. "Sedan," he said, "was a great misfortune, but it was a dishonor to no one, and it will never be regarded as a dishonor." From the Marshal's testimony it seems that he was in favor of giving Gen. DUCROT command of the army, but WIMPFEN claimed the right, on account of seniority. He expected to be able to get away from Sedan, but failing in all of his attempts he was left to sign the capitulation. The bitterness of feeling roused in him by this misfortune, led him to publish his foolish book, which, I am told, has been suppressed.

ASHBY.

Instability of French Affairs—The Bonapartist Conspiracy—The Worth of the Paris Press—A Probable Canard—The Commercial Treaty for Alsace-Lorraine—Trial of Rochefort—The Latest Scandal.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Sept. 22, 1871.

It is a common saying here that "nothing is stable in France except the provisional," and that "nothing can be counted on with certainty except the unexpected and the unforeseen." Of all others, perhaps, the special correspondent has the greatest reason to appreciate the force of these remarks, for each letter day brings something new and strange, which, but for that dreadful Atlantic cable, could be worked up in the most interesting style. But the days of "our own correspondent's" glory have long departed, and it is sad to think that instead of writing letters in very fine language which may hereafter make our reputations in a book, we have come to be mere annotators of telegraphic dispatches, and gleaners after that great lightening news-machine which lands our best topics in New-York before we even begin to write for the evening mail. It takes the starch out of one immensely to think that the very subject now on hand has been published, with editorial comments, in the journals of this morning, for not a quarter of the readers we ought to have will ever go back two weeks to pick up the thread of an old story. Yet there are some who will do it, and it is for those that we write, feeling all the while like a fossil in the hands of an antiquary. Still we are fossils kept in a giddy whirl of events, and it requires uncommon energy to pin an item here and there and to put it on paper before it gets to be old and stale. Time and time again I have made notes on Wednesday for Friday's letter, and when the day arrived the matters so carefully guarded had become of not even secondary importance. Yesterday I counted on the trial of ROCHEFORT for the most interesting item; today we have mysterious hints of a great conspiracy, which throws all other topics in the shade. The famous Lanterne must give place to (Gen. DOUAY, who, it now appears, has been accused of being the head of a well-planned Bonapartist conspiracy just discovered by the Government.

THE BONAPARTIST CONSPIRACY.

Up to this moment I have been unable to get the whole story, if, indeed, it is known outside of the Government Councils, but this morning brings us the first timid rumors. The facts are meagre enough. Beyond question Gen. FELIX DOUAY has recently made a secret visit to Chiselhurst, and there is no doubt that this was the cause of his being removed from his command, which has been given to MARSHAL CANROBERT. I am also informed that Gen. DOUAY was ordered to consider himself under arrest, and one of the morning journals says that he has actually been arrested. But, for the moment, let us deal with the few facts that we have, and then stick with the comments of the Parisian journalists. We find, pretty well established, a correspondence with several army officers, (by agents, not by letters,) and a secret visit to Chiselhurst on the part of Gen. DOUAY. Then we have a number of sudden changes in the army, the removal of Gen. DOUAY and the appointment of CANROBERT. To these facts we may add the presence of M. ROUHER in Auvergne, when he ought to be in Corsica; the sudden departure for the Midi of the Cassagnacs and several prefects of the former régime; the visit of the Express EUGENIE to Spain, and the presence of NAPOLEON III. at Torquay, off which place an elegant steam-yacht is said to be almost constantly hovering, and we have the skeleton of the "great Bonapartist conspiracy" just discovered by the Government of M. THIERS. Men dare speak of it only in whispers. The agents of the Police look unusually mysterious, and twist their mustaches upon the street-corners. The journals dare do no more than hint; but the well-known Imperialists are running about in a state of excitement trying to find some way of plunging headlong into conspiracy and rebellion. Nor is this all. The insurgent element is smiling at the thought of once more throwing work to the dogs and of shouldering a chassepot under no matter what banner so it be against the constituted authority. Even as I write a cavalry patrol is passing along the street, and the Police force has been increased; yet I do not believe that there is the slightest danger, or that there is anything of importance in the great conspiracy.

THE PARIS PRESS.

It is curious to note that it takes five or six journals to give the above piece of news about Gen. DOUAY. One speaks of him as an officer "whose name was prominent during the days of June." Another says, "a distinguished officer who was among the first to enter Paris." Another, "a gallant General whose brother was killed in battle at an early period of the war," and at last, in a very careful, timid way, one gives the name in connection with the appointment of CANROBERT, and hints at some slight trouble "through devotion to his former master." This is another sample of Parisian journalism. As usual, it is only by comparing a number of newspaper accounts of the same thing that one can arrive at a complete and connected story. It is so with almost everything. I have been for nearly an hour in trying to find out the judgment rendered yesterday in a celebrated suit for separation, and at last can only infer that the plaintiff won her case by the remark that thirty-six thousand francs was fixed upon as the yearly allowance of Madame la Princesse, which I suppose means alimony.

A PROBABLE CANARD.

To return to the great conspiracy, I must say that I believe it to be all moonshine, and that the visit to Chiselhurst is the only foundation for it. Imagination plays many a fantastic trick with the newspaper writers of Paris. One of them, by hints always, and not by direct assertion, gives us to understand that the visit of the Empress to Spain was only a blind, and that the real purpose was to cross the Pyrenees into France à la Duchesse de Berry, to feel the pulse of the peasants of Languedoc and La Vendée, in order to draw the attention of the Government in that direction while DOUAY was working his plan. The speedy removal of the latter has caused "the attempt to be given up for the moment." The improbability of this will be apparent, and we may also remark upon the singularity of removing DOUAY for his sympathies for the Emperor, and of appointing CANROBERT to his command. But although the whole thing may be absurd, and gotten up to influence the elections for the Council-General, it can not be thrown aside as of no importance. It has shown us that there is a very large party here ready for the opening of such a conspiracy, and it has given the meneurs the hope that they may soon have an opportunity of going into another insurrection. Nine out of every ten of this class are ready and willing to say "that it is not yet finished," that "their time will come yet;" and many are bold enough to say that they prefer an Empire to a Government like this—facts which show a spirit of opposition to constituted authority merely, and argue nothing against the Republic. Several more "incidents" in favor of the Empire have been received, and he is no longer called "Radiquet." For the first time since the war, his portraits are exposed in the shop-windows; yet I begin to think that this comes from no particular love or regard for the Empire or NAPOLEON, but from that inherent spirit of opposition which seems to be born in these French masses, and that restless longing for emancipation from something they know not what. Who can define the question? One instinctively feels that there is something lacking, and at times I am almost ready to believe that it is the reaction against the oppressive control of the priesthood which, en attendant mieux, finds its expression in revels against all civil authority.

THE COMMERCIAL TREATY FOR ALSACE-LORRAINE.

You have already heard about the difficulties which arose from the last act of the Assembly concerning the commercial treaty for Alsace-Lorraine, but I doubt if you were able to understand why such troubles were permitted. It seems so simple a matter to arrange a treaty when both parties are, at the bottom, perfectly agreed, that one wonders at this singular act. Prince BISMARCK asks certain privileges for the new German province, and as this would entail a loss of about fifty millions of customs duties, he offers to save the French Government twice the sum for maintaining the German troops, and to give up six departments besides. The offer was very liberal when we reflect that M. THIERS could not refuse without treating the Alsatians badly, and without running the risk of losing the strong argument that they are kept from la patrie by force when the day for the hoped for revenge shall come. Besides this, M. CHAVALLIER proves that the treaty itself will be a great blessing to France. The bargain was so entirely in favor of this country that it could not be refused. Count ARNIM came with the treaty. It was then suggested that the Assembly would not pass it, though amour-propre, unless there was some kind of reciprocity. Prince BISMARCK agreed to that. It was then settled that the treaty was to be granted on account of reciprocity, which permitted the entry into Alsace-Lorraine of the "articles necessary to the local industry." At midnight the proposition was voted by the Chamber, and the wording of it was "the products of French manufactures destined for the consumption of Alsace-Lorraine." The difference will be perceived at a glance, and it looks like an attempt at sharp practice. Instead of signing the treaty on the day appointed, Count ARNIM referred it to his Government. Not to make difficulties, Prince BISMARCK replied that, as both parties were agreed, the matter might be arranged; but it is not yet arranged, I am told, and a great deal of correspondence is going on about it.

TRIAL OF ROCHEFORT.

The trial of ROCHEFORT drew a larger crowd into the stranger's gallery than any of those which preceded it. Since completing the report this morning, I have tried in vain to find one redeeming point, one small count in the prisoner's favor. There is not one. ROCHEFORT showed his true character as he stood there before his judges, and betrayed the cowardice which has always marked his acts in moments of responsibility. His attitude was pitiful. His pallor was horrid. He trembled from head to foot; his voice, inaudible where I was sitting, was only heard in spasmodic sobs, and his whole appearance was so humble that it roused indignation instead of pity. Every heart throbbed with sympathy for ROSSEL, for he showed himself a man, but for ROCHEFORT, humble even to lying, and to the most repugnant pleading for a recognition of one point in his favor, there was only contempt. I have never had any respect for ROCHEFORT, but I did think him more of a man. In the face of his own articles, he claimed that his only aim was "conciliation"—he wished to reconcile the Commune and Versailles. As the worthy Col. MERLIN remarked, his articles were of the "extremest violence." To this ROCHEFORT replied, with a grotesque shrug of the shoulders, "I don't say that those articles are not violent and vulgar, but you must look at something else besides the mere form, for, at the bottom, there was always a conciliatory idea." That reply, in the face of the articles themselves, was simply disgusting. And as Col. MERLIN read these violent articles one by one, and asked ROCHEFORT what he had to say to them, he replied, "It was not I who wrote them." "But you are responsible for them." "Oh, I did not even read them—I didn't have time to read them." The letter of Gen. TROCHU was crushing. He tells how ROCHEFORT made public capital by giving up his salary to aid the Republic, then demanded every sou of it in secret, and he denies that ROCHEFORT helped to make him President; for, says TROCHU, with charming simplicity when we remember his defense against the charge of having betrayed the Empress, "that was my own work." TROCHU admits that he made himself President, turning out JULES FAVRE as the price of his adhesion to the new movement. He had the army in his hands. In ROCHEFORT's letter to the General, he demands "a character," and ends by saying, "The devil take me if I have a single thing with which to reproach myself." There we have the truth. There is no basis to that pitiful individuality but vanity, envy and ignorance. As for moral responsibility, he has none. With his horrible articles before him—and they are horrible—he has not a reproach for his conscience. One can scarcely understand such a mind. One can scarcely believe that he spoke the truth when he said that his conscience was without reproach. But in his exile-prison he will have time for reflection, although we may not hope that he will ever come to regard himself as other than an innocent martyr. More than once ROCHEFORT tried to dwell upon the fact that on the 4th of September he held Paris in his own hands, and he was greatly irritated to find that no one believed him. Perhaps he might have had if he had been an able man, but to play the rôle of Masaniello, certain grand qualities are necessary, and these are entirely wanting in the miserable person of HENRI ROCHEFORT.

THE LATEST SCANDAL.

I made allusion above to a suit for separation. This is the case of Mme. the Princess DE BEAUFFREMENT, born VALENTINE DE CHIMAY, which was begun before the war. The Prince is a Colonel of Hussars. Mme. DE BEAUFFREMENT gained her case on the first trial, but lost it on the appeal. This was due to circumstances. The case came on the 19th of July, the morning after the declaration of war. The Prince was to leave for the field of battle, and for a campaign which many who believed would be glorious, and at any rate, full of peril. This had an effect upon the minds of the Magistrates, who hoped that the husband, coming back in the character of a General, the halo of victory, and with the reputation of a hero, would be elevated to the old heights in the mind of the wife. They thought, at least, that the dangers of war would lead toward a reconciliation of these two high personages, and a separation was refused. During the campaign the Prince did not write to his wife, and openly boasted that while he intended to prevent the separation in order to control her handsome fortune, he never never would live with the Princess marital. No pleadings could move him. His letters to the family were of the shortest, and like those of the Queen's husband in "Ruy Blas," who wrote to the beautiful and tender Inez:

"The wind blows strong, Madame, and I have killed six wolves."

The Prince returned to his palace, but refused to be reconciled, and Madame's advocate presented a picture of the scene, giving its companion in the Prince's return from Mexico, when his first message to his wife was to complain because he could "find no shirts" in the house. There were abundant proofs of the Prince's negligence to his wife, and as many that he desired to enjoy her money, for he lapsed. This he can do by the laws of France, and Madame the Princess was allowed 25,000 francs a year of her own money to live on in a separate palace.

THE AUSTRIAN EMPIRE.

Prussia and the Elections for the Diet—German Influence Over the Slavonians—German Desire for a Federal Government—Results of the Elections—Proceedings in the Diets.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BERLIN, Saturday, Sept. 16, 1871.

Never have foreign elections been watched with such keen interest by the Germans as the Austrian, just concluded. Two important principles were involved. In the first place, this was the first occasion when the power of German influence, strengthened by the results of the late war, was to be tested. In the second place, there was the struggle between the Teutonic and Slavonian races, which is now fast becoming the prominent feature of European international relations. That struggle is slowly but surely coming to an issue. The Slavonian race, only just emerging from the depth of barbarism, still a half Asiatic element, is eager to make good its claim to a place in the European sisterhood of nations, and to cast off the reproach of inferiority which has hitherto attached to it. Austria is the fittest field for this battle, for there the two struggling elements are best mixed and most powerfully pitted against one another. The struggle between two neighboring races would have been probably inevitable under any circumstances; it has been accelerated and had force added to it by the intimacy with which the two have been compelled to mix. The Germans, pushing their way like air or water into every vacuum into which by chance or search they obtained access, have rapidly become a formidable and, to do them justice, civilizing and elevating power among the Slavonians, among whom other nationalities did not apparently dare or care to intrude. Thus in Russia almost all national progress is due to the Germans, who have strongly tinctured the commercial and scientific classes, and became a necessary element of the whole. In Austria the races are intermingled, as probably nowhere else two similarly antagonistic races are. But the Slavonians are a rising people, and one that will not bear subjection long, gifted as they are with tender susceptibilities and a strong love of national independence. The Germans feel the attack coming and prepare to resist it. The first skirmish is being fought in Austria; hence the interest and importance attaching to the issue. There is a third ground on which the elections claim the watchful attention of the Germans. Additional point is given to them, as far as the Imperial Government is concerned, and the future policy involved, by the Salzburg alliance, the particulars of which still remain a secret to the world, though we have new premises that they will not do so long. The Neue Freie Presse affirms itself authorized to announce a circular addressed to all foreign Cabinets from the pen of the Chancellor, Count BEUST, which is shortly to appear in print. Viewed as a sequel to the conferences, the Austrian elections constitute a terrible damper on the newly-aroused feeling in favor of the alliance, which might by a stretch of official imagination be described as something remotely akin to enthusiasm.

GERMAN DESIRE FOR A FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

Turning first to the elections themselves, and the interest they furnish to Austrian observers, I must call the attention of your readers to the growing desire for a Federal Government among the new German population. If the eight million Germans dispersed among the thirty odd millions of Austrians, have in point of civilization exerted a most beneficial influence in the incorrigibles among which they lurked, and proved in this respect useful rulers, they have not borne their power and authority very graciously, but let the ruled nationalities feel their inferiority keenly, and the northern forty millions have served as a loud and ever approving echo to their outposts in the south. If the Germans had not regarded their claim to rule as a natural right, attending their descent, it is questionable if the national feeling of the others would ever have become so powerful as it now is. This annoyance—for so I must call it—has, you may observe, gained the Germans a great many enemies in other European countries, who would otherwise gladly have paid the merited tribute to German culture, energy and perseverance, and threatens in time to become a serious danger to the Empire. Applied to Austria, it has not failed repeatedly to attract the censure of such Germans as could rise above the pettiness of party war, and acknowledge the duty of fair justice to opponents. The war of 1866 gave a fresh impetus to the nationalist movement, and the Slavonic and Magyar population caught not, perhaps, to be severely blamed for carrying the sentiment so far, in the face of the incessant and bitter attacks made on them by the northern Press and people. The division in two halves necessarily marked out Federalism as the future policy of the Empire. It may be questioned if, in the abstract, Federalism is an advantageous institution for a temporarily weak Empire like Austria. But in the first place it is necessary to be borne in mind that the provinces do not claim great privileges in the way of government. They hold no democratic or republican views, they will submit to almost any demand of personal government, but it must emanate from their own rulers and have a flavor of their own nationality about it. A Czech will do anything for a king of Bohemia, but he hates the title Emperor of Austria. Another consideration presents itself in the fact that apparently it is not a question which mode of government is advantageous or not, but which is possible. When twenty-two million people set their hearts on a Federal Constitution, it is not only unwise, it is downright impossible for a Government to rule against this wish with the minority of eight millions. Events have proved this. Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH has appointed several Ministries since 1867, Feudalists, Liberals, so-called "citizens"—nothing would answer. The present Ministry composed, it must be allowed, partly of inefficient men, and having begun its time of office under the most inauspicious circumstances, promises to keep itself in power still mainly by force of its Federalism, or hitherto only supposed Federalism, programme. Hungary has proved the correctness of the same theory. Up to 1867 was the hot-bed of revolutions, intrigues and opposition. Since FRANCIS JOSEPH placed the Hungarian crown of Wenzel on his head, since it is not the Austrian Emperor, but the King of Hungary that addresses the Magyars, the people could be more loyal or tractable. The present Ministry's object, therefore—as far as we can now see judged—in the late elections and the coming Parliament, was to obtain a majority for such changes in the Constitution as should admit of the extension of partial autonomy to the provinces, and give the Government the support of all its various classes of subjects. This "leveling upward" process is not necessarily an Anti-German one, providing, as it does, for the imperial representation of all interests. Observe, also, that the majority of the German landed interest gives its adherence to the Ministerial measure. It is Anti-German only in comparison, destroying, as it does, an artificial ascendency. In the Germans lost in several provinces, it is because there they are in a minority, and have pushed themselves to the superior rank at an opposing nationality. So far, it will be admitted, the Austrian Government is not wrong. There is, however, a leaven of feudalism in its composition that may bode ill for its future policy. Whether this feudalism will have an opportunity for showing itself is still very doubtful, for the Cabinet has a great task before it, the work of reconstruction, which promises to engross its whole labor throughout the duration of its natural life, which, considering the contradictory elements contained, does not threaten to be very long. On the other hand, it must be admitted that a strong government is needed for Austria under all circumstances, but never more than after the introduction of Sadhsen and in its present state of general debility. How useful a strong government is when a whole empire has to be reconstructed, the Germans have recently learned to appreciate. But nobody will attempt to justify the unscrupulous means of influencing the elections employed by Government, which are the more blameable, as the true programme was persistently concealed, and hints were all the guidance afforded to electors. So ambitious were all these hints, that even the professedly oppressed class, the Germans, admit that they had not a word from Ministers to point to as directly justifying their apprehensions. The project was, however, generally understood, and though the defeated party sulks at the defeat, it does not complain of having been kept in the dark.

FETTED NATIONALITIES.

Perhaps Government overdoes its coquetting with the Slavonian nationalities. The Czechs are being petted like spoilt children, and the Poles, for whom Count HOHENWART appears to have discovered an especially liberal portion of love in his large heart, are being smothered under kind professions and promises. A speech of the lately-appointed Governor of Galicia, Count GOLUCHOWSKY, has created especial sensation in this respect, and is likely to be strongly misinterpreted. While at Cracow, the ancient Polish capital, (Lemberg is now the capital of Galicia,) the Governor received the noted Polish leader, Prince CZARTORYSKI, who is confessedly "a Pole first and Austrian afterward," and a deputation, and in replying to their address, dwelt at length on the love he bore to Cracow and to his Polish race. "Never every one feels that he is still a Pole. Let me hope that soon the condition, not only of this city, but of our whole people, will recover; that we, now dispersed, shall be reunited. Yes, we have a bright future before us; to us the mission is reserved of henceforth watching, not only over our own interests, but equally over those of the entire Slavonian race." No Polish nationalist could have uttered greater treason from an Austrian point of view. Further, perhaps the Government's many naves to make itself government particularly acceptable to try districts at five florins, and is to include all taxes, not only property tax. A majority of two-thirds is still to be requisite for changes even in the provincial Constitution. This is a very brief summary of the Election bill, but contains all the leading points. Besides this, Government has brought in some other measures of minor importance.

THE GERMAN ATTITUDE.

Of course the great point was, How will the Germans bear their defeat? Government has, on the whole, not been fortunate in this respect. Opposition of the gravest kind having been offered by various Diets. The Germans make a great show of resistance, but their own organs hardly appear to credit them with carrying out their threats. As long as Government had not spoken, they still expressed hope that it might be giving itself out far worse than it was; that it might not contemplate hostile measures after all. Even after this hope proved vain, the Cabinet is not credited with sufficient temerity to go great lengths in the face of decided opposition, even from a small minority. German papers openly admit this, and recommend their party to put a determined face upon it, as a piece of tactics. The Czechs in Moravia and Bohemia having carried their way by total abstention from attending in Parliament, the New Free Press for some days urgently advised the Germans to take a leaf out of their adversaries' book; but the old Presse strongly disadvises this mode of meeting the attack, as dangerous and likely to miscarry. Upon this the New Free Press has retracted its rash advice; but Deputies have in several Diets already begun carrying it out. The Presse places her last hope in the constitutional loyalty of the Upper House.

PROVINCIAL LEGISLATION.

In Lower Austria the Diet met, but pronounced the new Election bill illegal; in Upper Austria sixteen members gave their opinion that the Assembly was illegal and left the room. In Moravia, the liberal members never appeared, but sent a declaration instead. In Styria, things went off smoothly, only the Bishops did not make their appearance. In Krain, fourteen members remained absent, protesting by a written declaration. In Galicia, the Governor was well received. The Silesian Diet, representing an insignificant province with a very mixed population, as its first answer to Ministerial proposals, defeated a motion to make Slavonian the ruling language of the province, and declared in favor of German. The most interesting opening took place at Prague. Reconciled by the advances of Government, the Bohemian and Moravian Czechs appear to have abandoned their theoretical scruples for practical advantages. Indeed, the Bohemians are in high feather and exuberant good spirits. The session was opened with the reading of an Imperial rescript, which the Czech journals, above all the factious Pokrok, interpret as a concession made in consideration of the attitude lately preserved by the refractory, or, as the Pokrok regards it, the justly-aggrieved Czech members. The rescript is couched in very friendly language, expresses the hope that a thoroughly good understanding may be established between the Crown and the province, and invites the Diet to deal with the measures submitted to it for this purpose in a friendly spirit. Finally, it grants the Bohemians what they have long pined for. The Emperor will henceforth no more be their Emperor but their King. He is ready to undergo a new coronation at Prague, with the historical crown of King WENZEL, and to pledge his faith, by coronation oaths identical with those used at Pesth. At this concession the Czechs are exultant, and naturally enough, in the fraiseballition of their joy indulge in language sometimes considerably exceeding the bounds of reason. Loud shouts of "Slava" accompanied the welcome announcement read in both languages in the Assembly.

UP VESUVIUS.

A Tourist's Experience—A Cherished Illusion, for Cost and the Destructive.

Naples (Sept. 17) Correspondence London Daily News:

"It is erupting, Sir," said an American to me, as we stood before the door of a hotel; and so it was. During the whole day a thin column of smoke issued from the summit, and at night a red-hot river seemed to be pouring down its side. "My dear," I said to my wife, "we must go to Vesuvius." So yesterday we started by the train for Resina. The modern town of that name consists of half a dozen houses, three of which are inns. The guides to the mountain are found at the gate leading into the ancient Pompeii. There we hired a carriage, and drove to the observatory of a Government official. At 4 P. M. each mounted upon a horse, with a guide on a third, and a youth following on to make himself generally useful, Louisa and I started from the Hotel Diomede. For the first hour the path led through vineyards. For the second hour we went over lava, which seems to have shot straight up the mountain. It seems to be the mission of Neapolitans to teach the world what can be got out of a horse. Along all the roads in the vicinity of Naples the most wretched-looking screws feel merrily along, up and down hill, dragging behind them heavily laden two-wheeled carts, with often from six to twenty men and women perched indiscriminately upon them. An English horse would have declined at once to have faced the path of the mountain. Our horses reached the brink of the cone without turning a hair, and we then dismounted, and were immediately assailed by a number of porters and speculators. One held a bottle to my lips, and urged me to drink a little wine in order to gain strength enough to reach the summit. A chair was produced, in which Louisa was invited to seat herself, and in which she was to be carried by four men. A strap was put round my shoulders, two porters, who began to lead me forward in this (supposed to the guide to five in front of me, and I found myself. He played into their hands, and demanded that no one ever had could, or would get up the mountain unassisted. Finding that impossible, his appeal was then made to my manhood, and I, with a view to adroit the poetry twenty-five francs, the price of the chair, risk the health of my wife? Money was always to get, observed a moralist, but time lost can never be recovered. Louisa, however, rather prides herself on her pedestrian powers, and who thinks more of twenty-five francs than I do, scorned the idea of my being carried on foot we started, the guide subtly making reflections upon the stinginess of Englishmen, and our tormentors following us. The cone of Vesuvius is certainly not easy walking. It is almost perpendicular, and it is mainly made up of ashes, one slips back two steps for every three that one takes. Each time Louisa stopped for a moment to rest, the chair was instinctively thrust before her, while at every false step which I made a strap was dangled before me, and I was invited to lay hold of it. Women have more pluck than men, and I confess that several times I should have given up, had not Louisa, who had at the same time the example of LOUISA, every few minutes merrily declining the chair. One by one our friends fallen off, and after climbing, scrambling and slipping for an hour we triumphantly reached the summit. My notion of a volcano was that it consisted of one, no doubt—has always been the notion of the majority—perpetually spouting and boiling. I was awakened from this delusion by the guide pointing to a small hole, about six feet in diameter, and saying, "That is the small crater." A few steps further on we came upon the edge of a basin of ashes, with a hole about thirty feet in diameter at the bottom, which, "is the large crater." We got down disgusted. It was now getting dark. "Come this way," said the guide, "and you will see the flames." I did see through the mist and smoke a livid light, which I was told was the hole from which the lava is now flowing. By this time it was quite dark, and we were almost choked with the fumes of sulphur. The guide began explaining that he had seven children, all of whom, he observed, were twins. LOUISA became interested in these domestic details, and would have sat listening to them for an hour, but it seemed to me about time to think of getting down. The guide took LOUISA by the arm and said, "Take long steps and stick your heels well into the cinders." He then disappeared from my view into the darkness with the wife of my bosom. I followed as I could. Never, no never, did I experience a more disagreeable sensation than going down that mountain of cinders. Every step I took, although a dog my heels into the cinders, I thought that I was going head over heels down some fearful abyss. Every few minutes the mountain was lit up by a flash of lightning, which enabled me vaguely to distinguish the guide and Louisa far below me sticking their heels, too, into the cinders. At last we reached the bottom. The boy who had been left with the horses had lit a small lantern, otherwise we never should have found them. "We had better," said the guide, "take a short cut, home to mill rate soon." The short cut seemed to be a precipitous descent. Why the horses did not roll over I cannot imagine. It was too dark to see that they were doing, but so far as I could distinguish, my feet were almost on a level with my horse's ears. Just before we got to the bottom of the mountain it came on to rain in torrents, and, we to the hole, we took refuge in a lava post-horse-like, where we ordered wine, which the father of the twins drank. Torches were lighted, and in another hour we reached the Hotel Diomede, tired, stiff and drenched, and turned into bed, but not to sleep. I soon heard the horrid buzz which heralds the approach of a mosquito, and whilst my upper lip was attacked by those vile insects, all that my lower man was becoming the prey of fleas. These creatures, as soon as it was light, were succeeded by a legion of flies, which prevented me even then from sleeping by settling upon my nose. The blue sky, the azure sea, the sunshine, the balmy breezes of Naples, its orange groves and its mountains, are all very well in their way; but, as a matter of choice, I would, for the matter, rather live in more northern latitudes, where the climate is perhaps a shade worse, where the beauties of nature are not so striking, but where one is not bitten by mosquitoes and fleas. As for these latter insects, I do wish that one of these persons who believe that everything having life is created for a purpose, would tell me of what use they are. I can forgive a gnat or a flea, as even a wasp, for they torment one in order to feed, but the idea that natural selection, after taking a fancy to make insects bite, seems to be to annoy the human race. One is taught at school that Nero when a boy used to kill them, and that as a necessary consequence, later in life he killed his mother. For my part, I forgive him many of his crimes, for having passed his childhood in destroying those noxious insects. On the whole, if I might venture a suggestion to those who are thinking of ascending Vesuvius, it would be "Don't." It does not repay the trouble. From a distance the eruption is a fine object, particularly when there is an eruption, but to see it in its mind-like dining behind the scenes of a theatre. The illusion is destroyed; after several hours toil all one sees is two or three holes emitting smoke in a heap of cinders—a sight about as interesting as the chimney of a manufactory.

VIRGINIA.

Virginia Conservatives Alarmed—The Richmond Examiner on the Situation—The Cry of "Repudiation" Raised by Conservative Candidates—The Prospect in Richmond—Public Political Discussion Between Two Negroes.

From Our Own Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 4, 1871.

The Conservatives of Virginia are becoming alarmed. The Richmond Enquirer of today says: "We do not like the political out-look in this State. There is a cloud in the sky, which may bring foul weather if the wind does not change. With a fair majority of twenty thousand in the State, with a fair claim to two-thirds of the Legislature, the Conservatives are conducting themselves in a manner so suicidal and so reckless that we have grave apprehensions with regard to the result of the election which is now rapidly approaching. We fear we have been spoiled by too much good fortune. There is a fault-finding temper abroad, a disposition to cavil and complain and make difficulties, that is seriously distracting and disorganizing the party. There are rivalries and contests in the counties for place and office, a spirit of demagoguism that seeks to make capital out of the embarrassments of the people, an absence of lofty and self-denying patriotism in the presence of a great public peril, that looks like the harbinger of disaster. United, compact, with an eye single to the discomfiture of the Radical Party, the campaign in Virginia would be a holiday affair. But that grand Conservative organization which in 1869, as if by a common impulse, rose up and wrested the State from H. H. WELLS and his noble army of leaguers and freedmen, looks now more like a rabble than a disciplined host. * * * We want you to understand distinctly that there is great danger of defeat."

The Richmond Whig, of this date, also says: "We have no time to lose. There is but a month for work, and upon the efforts made during that period our very salvation depends."

These extracts testify fully to the alarm that is general among the Conservatives, and which seems to promise a Republican victory in the coming election. This election will take place on Tuesday, the 7th of November, and is for the whole House of Delegates and half the Senate, or twenty Senators. The reapportionment of representation in both branches, made by the last General Assembly, was denounced by Republicans as most unfair and iniquitous; but notwithstanding the advantages thus acquired, the Conservatives are quaking with apprehension. All the questions which they thought to cleverly evade by adopting no platform, and drown under the war-cry of "Opposition to Radicalism," have arisen to confront and appal them in the platform adopted by the late Republican State Convention. Already, in various parts of the Commonwealth, these questions (which will not down at the bidding of any man or party) are working divisions in the Conservative ranks. Chief among them all looms the public debt question, upon which Conservative candidates (regular or independent) are forced to take stands, either in support of the pending bill or in opposition to it—some of them even going so far as to favor the repudiation of the debt altogether. It is a remarkable circumstance, and one most full of hopeful prospect to the Republicans, that this rising and threatening discord among the Conservatives occurs and grows mostly where the Conservatives are strongest, and where the Republicans have nothing to lose and everything to gain—in the northern and western counties, where the colored population is very small, and where white Conservatives have heretofore borne undisturbed rule. Take, for instance, Rockingham County, in the Valley of Virginia, lying between Staunton and Winchester. The Old Commonwealth, published at Harrisonburg, in that county, comes to us with a report of the speeches recently made in Rockingham by three Conservative candidates for the Legislature. Mr. DARNELL, who was formerly a member of the State Senate for over twenty years, is reported to have spoken in the following strain:

"He argued that when the old State of Virginia was destroyed by the Federal Government, and her territory hacked out, her territory forcibly dismembered, and her conquered people placed under martial law, and she declared to be no longer a State in the Union, according to the established principles of international law, acknowledged by all the great Powers of the Old World, her public debt was wiped out with her sovereignty, and became null and void to all intents and purposes, and that the new State of Virginia is not bound, either in honor, equity or law, to pay it. He said the agent who represented the English holders of a portion of the Virginia bonds had admitted the correctness of the proposition stated, both as to the law and the justice in the case. He said, in addition to this view of the case, he contended that, by the forcible erection of a new State within her domain and the destruction of her property by military occupation, and the abolishment of slavery by the Federal Government, Virginia was left in a condition in which she could not pay this debt, if she would, and ought not, if she had the ability. He contended that the obligation to pay this debt was with the Federal Government, if it rested anywhere."

Col. O'FERRELL said that he believed that the people of what is left of old Virginia are not bound, either in law, equity, or honor, to pay the ante-war debt, and said that if it could not be thrown off in any other way, it was the duty of the Legislature to repudiate it. He was not willing to make any compromise with the bondholders so far as the ante-war debt is concerned, but would repudiate every dollar of it. Through the agency of the Federal army and the acts of Congress our territory had been severed in twain, millions of our property confiscated, and therefore there was neither moral nor legal obligation to pay.

Mr. PATTERSON said that he was no less in favor of measures of relief for the people than those who had preceded him. Under the operation of unwise and improper legislation, and the burdens imposed by the requirements of the Constitution, the people were groaning under an intolerable load of taxation, and it was the duty of the Legislature to remove this burden to the extent of its power. He was not willing to pay the ante-war debt, if it could be honorably avoided. He concurred in the views of the gentlemen who had preceded him relative to the principle in international law that the destruction of the sovereignty of a State or nation necessarily wipes out its public debt. He was opposed to the Funding bill, and if elected would vote for the repeal of the twelve per cent. clause of the Constitution and the law enacted in pursuance thereof."

All this is positive and utter repudiation, and is going much further than the Republican platform, which looks only to a postponement of the debt.

Here in this city and county the out-look for the Conservatives is not particularly brilliant. Two of the three candidates nominated for the Senate are complained of as not having fairly received the nominations, one having received only 48 votes and the other 54, there being ninety delegates in Convention, and every delegate voting for two men. It is insisted that 81 is the least number of votes that should have nominated under the circumstances, and one of the nominees (Col. J. K. CONNOLLY, who received fifty-six votes) has expressed his willingness to withdraw and have the nominations made over again. If the other nominees will do likewise, from the Conservative ticket for the House of Delegates, Judge JOHN A. MEREDITH will be withdrawn, because, as he alleges, if elected he would have to resign his office of City Attorney before he could take his seat. The Judge's withdrawal sickens everybody with the ticket as it stands, as he was specially chosen to lead the ticket on account of his ability, experience and worth. The City Convention convenes again to-morrow morning to fill this vacancy, and if it be not wisely filled there will be as much dissatisfaction that Richmond will be likely to go Republican. On the other hand, the Republicans have put up tickets here for the Senate and House, which the Conservatives own to be the best ever offered by the party here. The candidates are mostly native Virginians, men of character and substance, and who retain the respect of their fellow citizens generally despite their politics. It is true that the colored people are somewhat dissatisfied with the fact that they have only one person of their race on either ticket; but they are becoming convinced of the prudence of this, and will acquiesce in it, no doubt, without the least abatement of their enthusiasm for the success of the Republican Party.

To-night the novel spectacle will be presented at City Hall, of a political discussion between two negro speakers. H. R. HONSON, a colored barber of this city, will represent the Conservative side in the debate, and a colored man named ARNOLD, from North Carolina, being the Republican champion. This is the first discussion of the kind ever held in this city by colored speakers, and will attract a large crowd of both colors. It is noteworthy, too, that though ARNOLD is the challenger in this case, the Conservative authorities have allowed the debate to take place in the City Hall.

Ex-Gov. HENRY A. WISE, after a labor of several years, has just completed "Seven Decades of the Union, including a Narrative of the Life of Tyler." If this be not a valuable work, it will, at any rate, be a curious and interesting one, as embodying the views of a prominent and accomplished man upon events and persons during the "decades" commented on. The work will be published by LIPPINCOTT & Co., Philadelphia, in December.

Some time ago a negro named TURNER, then in the City of New-York, sent a package of raisins to his wife ISABELLA, in this city, which sickened her and all who partook of the fruit. It was afterward found that arsenic had been plentifully powdered over and among the raisins. TURNER was arrested in New-York, and brought here on due requisition to answer a charge of attempting to poison his wife, and he is now lying in jail awaiting trial by our Hustings Court. He was said to be cohabiting with (if not married to) another woman in your City, and this woman, claiming the name of SARAH TURNER, recently came here to watch over TURNER's fate. She was arrested on suspicion of being an accomplice (if not the principal) in the attempt to poison, and her case is awaiting investigation. E.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Approaching Municipal Election—The Lesson Taught by New-York.

From a Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Oct. 2, 1871.

The exposé of the gigantic frauds perpetrated by the Democratic rulers of New-York has been by no means local in its effect upon the public mind. Popular indignation is not confined to the tax-payers of the State of New-York. The political earthquake which has engulfed Messrs. HALL, TWEED, CONNOLLY and SWEENY has extended its shock to every city in the Union, and even the little town of Wilmington, Del., sends the glad tidings that she has wrested herself from the Tammany party.

In November next, it is to be hoped, our State will place herself in the ranks with Maine and California; but this consummation, so devoutly to be wished, will, in a great measure, perhaps entirely, depend upon the result of the coming municipal election in the neighboring City of Philadelphia, until recently the great stronghold of Republicanism. If Philadelphia sends in a majority of from six thousand to ten thousand it will give as great an impetus to the party of reform here as did the triumph of HARTRANFT and CAMPBELL in October, 1869.

The Democratic Party of Philadelphia is controlled by precisely the same element as that which has plunged New-York City into almost irretrievable debt. Its Democratic Police force is notoriously the most incompetent in the Union, and during the present Democratic administration, the fair fame of the Quaker City has fallen to the level of that of Baltimore during the reign of the "Plug Uglies."

The Mayor, Mr. DANIEL M. FOX, in whom is vested the appointing power of the Police force, we understand is a most upright and conscientious gentleman, but, owing to the fact that no Democratic nomination can be procured unless at the hands of Aldermen WM. MCMULLEN, ROBERT LESTER SMITH, JOHN TOBIN and others of the dangerous classes, a Democratic Mayor is confessedly under the absolute control of the greatest law-breakers in the community.

The same statement applies to the Prosecuting Attorney of the County of Philadelphia, who does not dare indict JOHN AUBREY and the other Democratic roughs, who in October, 1869, murderously assaulted the return judges while engaged in counting the votes of the election then just held.

The citizens of Philadelphia, who have been aroused to an investigation of their own affairs by the developments in New-York, begin to realize the importance of keeping their municipal Government in the hands of the Republican Party, and we shall be much disappointed if the whole Republican city ticket is not overwhelmingly elected. It will be well, however, for our Philadelphia friends to remember that Tammany has a desperate game to play just now, and a Democratic success in Pennsylvania would not only be followed by a similar success in New-York, but would strengthen the hands of Tammany and embolden their chiefs to perpetuate their rule. Therefore, Philadelphians, on the morning of the second Tuesday of October next, you may expect to see many strange faces at your polling-places sent by TWEED and his friends to elect Messrs. BIDDLE, SHEPPARD, FRY, and the whole Tammany ticket.

The Election Laws.

Important changes have been made in the Election laws by the Legislature, at its last session, which passed an act, chapter 712, amending the statutes relating to the election of Senators and members of Assembly, and Representatives in Congress. Except in this City, Senators and Representatives in Congress have heretofore been voted for upon the ballot indorsed "State." By the act of last Winter, Senators and Representatives in Congress, in all the counties of the State, will hereafter be voted for upon separate ballots. Where electing only one member of Assembly, the nominee has heretofore been voted for upon the ballot indorsed "State." By the act of 1871, members of Assembly in all the counties and Assembly districts will now be be voted for upon a separate ballot. At the ensuing general election at least four ballots will be voted in all the counties, and Inspectors of Election are required to furnish a corresponding number of ballot-boxes. The ballot indorsed "State," will contain the nominees for State officers, and the county officers to be chosen this Fall. Senators will be voted for upon the ballot indorsed "Senate." Members of Assembly will be voted for upon the ballot indorsed "Assembly." Justices of the Supreme Court, County Judges, Surrogates and Special County Judges or Surrogates, will be voted for upon a ballot indorsed "Judiciary." The ballots will be deposited in ballot-boxes corresponding in color, and canvassed in the order above named. In several counties or Commissioners districts, where vacancies exist, School Commissioners will be elected upon an additional ballot, indorsed "School Commissioner." A special election law remains in force as to New-York City. In the City of Brooklyn, an election for city officers will be held on the day of the ensuing general election. In the City of Utica, a Recorder will also be chosen, and in the City of Buffalo a Judge of the Superior Court. By an amendment of the charter of the City of Buffalo, passed in 1871, the time for holding the city election was changed from November until the first Tuesday in March.

The Secretary of State is preparing a compilation of the Election laws, with forms and instructions adapted to the change in ballots and ballot boxes, and order of canvassing votes—the repeal of the Recorder's law, and the extension of the right of suffrage to colored men, by the Legislature of 1870, &c., which will be distributed to election officers during the coming month.

EX-SECRETARY SEWARD

Another Interesting Letter from One of his Lady Traveling Companions.

Their Visit to Ancient Goa, in India—Singular Mishaps of the Voyage, and Its Happy Ending—Extraordinary Honors Paid the Visitors—Graphic Account of the Locality and the People.

From the Fredonia Censor we quote in full the following graphic letter from the pen of Miss OLIVE RISLEY SEWARD, to her father, Mr. W. A. SEWARD, of that village, describing an excursion of the Seward party to ancient and modern Goa, in India:

ON THE COAST OF MALABAR, April 19, 1871.

We were in a strait Friday last. An excursion down this coast to ancient Goa, the first effective European settlement in India, and always the capital of the Portuguese Indian Empire, promised a pleasure not to be lost, and seemed a duty not to be omitted. But Mr. SEWARD had engaged to dine with the Byculla Club of Bombay, to-morrow, and the semi-weekly packet to Goa could not be relied upon. On twenty-four hours' notice of this dilemma, the Government fitted out a revenue-cutter lying in commission. The Captain was unacquainted with the route, and an extra one was appointed; crew, furniture, and provisions were extemporized, and to make assurance of an exact return doubly sure we sailed on Saturday at sunset.

The Cornel, besides her proper British colors, was courteously invested with the Stars and Stripes, and we were accompanied by Mr. FARNHAM, the United States Consul. Proceeding merrily, with a speed of eight knots, we began to inquire about dinner and sleeping arrangements. Mal de mer came earlier than dinner. The cabins were spacious enough, but unavailable. The vessel sat low in the water, and the ports were necessarily closed, the thermometer standing at 90°. Cabins were improvised on deck by use of flapping sails. These privations gave the voyage something of the zest of a picnic, and we endured them with the resolution to enjoy discomforts, usually practised on such occasions.

Our double captaincy unanimously decided, the night being dark, that we should push directly out to sea. We pushed so far that it was not until noon on Sunday that we came back in sight of land. We proceeded until night-fall along the coast of the once famous but now obsolete kingdom of Golconda. Notwithstanding the loss of time during the previous night, we found ourselves on Sunday noon so far advanced that our Siamese amiable determined to "slow down," that is to say, "slacken up," so as to avoid reaching Goa before daylight the next morning. With the pleasing intimation that we should leave the ship at sunrise, we retired to our mattresses at 9 o'clock, the grumbling Portuguese forts on the Goa shore being in full view, and the gladdened Bombay packet just before us, leading the way. Our sleep was "murdered" by a mutiny among the crew, which was only quelled when the leader was tied up at the forecastle. Monday's dawn, instead of the summons to go ashore, brought blank consternation! We were not at anchor in the harbor, but once more afloat on the sea, no land in sight, neither of our navigators knew where we had strayed, neither knew how we came there. Our marine navigator only light, but an unmistakeable object to steer by. Joy radiated from the faces of the Captains, and for ourselves, nothing but our early training in the first one of the ten stone commandments which came down from Sinai, prevented us from becoming Parsees and worshiping the fiery orb on the spot. We sped eastward, and the first landmark showed that we had left Goa twenty miles behind. We made it, however, though not without peril from hidden rocks, at 11 o'clock in the morning.

If the gallant officers who had been waiting for us twelve long hours, in their tight, uncomfortable uniforms, were surprised to see us coming through a hitherto unknown channel, as if from Mauritius, instead of the safe northern one from Bombay, their astonishment did not exceed that of our two commanders, who until this very time are unable to account for their error of navigation. The native pilot, they say, disobeyed their directions; "there was suddenly a strong outward current unknown in this sea before," moreover, "there is indicated on the chart just there an iron mountain, which deflected the needle;" moreover and furthermore, "the ship's compass, useless in harbor movements, had not been adjusted for this outside navigation."

Two rivers, the Narwar and the Mumungoa, form a deep estuary, and the Island of Goa, upon which the town is built, rises out of this estuary very much like Manhattan Island at the confluence of the Hudson and East Rivers in the Bay of New-York. The green banks of both rivers are crowned with fortifications, which are well preserved, and with churches and convents, none of which are dilapidated, while others have been converted to secular uses. On reaching the bar we were boarded by the officer of the port, and delayed until the fort on shore delivered a salute in honor of Mr. SEWARD. Our flags were dipped in acknowledgement, and an hour later we came to anchor before a quaint and picturesque little city, with extensive fortification standing immediately on the wharf in front, in place of the Governor-General. The buildings, unique though plain, seem to speak from their open windows and graceful balconies a hospitable welcome. An infantry battalion was drawn up on the esplanade, and the river shores were crowded with a swarthy but well-dressed and genteel-looking people. Mr. SEWARD was conveyed by the Governor-General's staff in a well-manned barge, where he was welcomed by the Secretary of State, and received with military honors. The band employed on this occasion, although it consisted exclusively of natives, excels any we have heard in Europe. Western arts and customs seem capricious in taking root in these strange countries. On our journey to Pekin, we noticed that the band of Admiral Roquame's flagship was composed chiefly of dark natives of Goa. They executed better than any other performers the "Charta," as they called the beautiful national air of Portugal. Associated as it was in our recollections of them cold and dreary travels, it was peculiarly pleasing when that noble hymn burst upon us from the instruments of a full band of the same sympathetic race, in their own tropical home.

Capt. MAJOR's family, the only American one residing here, divided with us the honors of our entertainment with the Governor-General, the Viscount DE JANUARIS.

The Goa where we were received so kindly is only by derivation the Goa of history. Ancient Goa stood eight miles higher on the same left bank of the Narwar. Founded by ALBUQUERQUE, the most renowned of all the Portuguese admirals, after DE GAMA, it was laid out on an imperial scale, and surrounded by a wall and fortifications, which rendered it for more than a century impregnable. An immense population gathered there. It contained the magnificent palace of the Viceroy, the college, the hospital, the Arch-episcopal palace, and the halls of the Inquisition. Within its attractive precincts was built a church, monastery, convent or chateau. Armies two hundred thousand strong were repelled from its walls, and imposing embassies from the barbaric kings and princes of the east trod its spacious streets. One hundred and eighty years ago it was found to be unhealthful and was abandoned. Although high has since disappeared from that once busy stage some remnants of its activity and glory remain. We proceeded in carriages over a firm and well-preserved causeway, which once resounded with the tramp of pageants and of armies, to the ruined city. By the roadside and in the neighboring jungle, moss-covered, monumental crosses, decorated daily by pious hands with fresh flowers, indicate scenes of violence and suffering, perhaps of miracles or martyrdom, enacted here. Cocoanut groves and mango orchards now shade grounds once covered by bazaars and houses. Here and there a deserted palace, closed but not yet in ruins, testifies of wealth and luxury passed away, and the curious tourist is warned not to penetrate its mouldering courts and tangled gardens, lest he come unawares upon the most venomous serpents of India. Of an hundred religious institutions, only one now remains, and that has a long place-keeper of three nuns. A high arched gate, overgrown with creepers, is all that exists of the vice-regal palace. While the college and hospital have been renewed in the new town, happily no trace of the Inquisition remains in either city. The Government has kept the cathedral and churches in repair. They are built in the style of the sixteenth century. Mr. SEWARD says they are less imposing and costly than the churches built by the Spaniards in the same period in Mexico and South America. (They are nevertheless far superior to religious edifices in the United States.)

The church of Bon Jesus contains the tomb of St. FRANCIS XAVIER. You will remember that he was associated with IGNATIUS LOYOLA in establishing the Society of Jesus, and that he came out on his apostolate to India, even before the Papal allowance of the new order was granted. Perhaps this church was the first of the many thousands which have arisen in all parts of the world under the labors of that mysterious community which has been so indomitable and indefatigable while encountering so many vicissitudes. The mausoleum is an oblong pedestal of Carrara marble, ten feet high, panelled with bronze bas reliefs, representing the miracles of the Saint. Upon this pedestal is a sarcophagus of gilded copper, which contains the embalmed remains, and is inclosed in an elaborately wrought case of silver. The Grand Duke of Tuscany only expressed the reverence of Catholic Europe for XAVIER in presenting this exquisite monument to the Church of the Jesuits, which is so closely identified with his labors. The tomb stands in a vaulted chamber, the walls of which are graced with admirable devotional paintings, but unfortunately it is so much and dark that not only the sarcophagus but the monument itself is deprived of its most effect. The sarcophagus is opened at long intervals, by permission of the King of Portugal, and on these occasions the holy Gun is reanimated by hundreds of thousands of natives, assembled from all parts of Asia. It may well be believed, as we are told, that not only the faithful Catholics, but even the unconverted Hindoos, confidently expect supernatural effects to follow from the contact then allowed with the sacred remains. India is filled with fragments of the Saint, and the Jesuit writers have carefully collected, collaborated and authenticated them. In one of these traditions, Saint FRANCIS XAVIER not only relieved the poor with money brought out from the depths of the sea, healed the sick, made the dumb to speak, cured the lame and blind, cast out devils and raised the dead by simple invocation of the name of God; but he performed a store of those miracles that the Gospels record of the Saviour of man and his chosen twelve apostles. A resident of Goa, reliable for intelligence and candor, told us that when the sarcophagus was last opened, a lady well known to him became the subject of a supposed miracle. Having been hopelessly lame from birth, she solicited parental leave to attend the ceremony and touch the venerated dead. Her skeptical parents refused; she persisted, and in the moment of contact she became whole, and so remains. Our informant of course ascribes this extraordinary cure to the influence of her over-excited imagination.

But the homage paid to the memory of XAVIER may well be regarded without cavil or regret even by those whose education obliges them to reject his alleged miracles. He surpassed his spiritual contemporaries in faith, hope, charity, patience, courage, zeal and perseverance. He committed no crime, indulged no vices, and if he tolerated African slavery and the Inquisition in the East, they were the errors of his age, and he was less severe against the renegade of the Church than in self-condemnation. It was his noble maxim that the Church is advanced more by the blood of martyrs than by the sweat of missionaries. He found India wholly a Pagan and Mahomedan land, and, by his teaching and example, using neither force nor fraud, he made more Christian converts than can be found on Indian soil at the present day. It was not, however, for St. FRANCIS XAVIER, nor the Jesuits, nor the Catholic Church of the sixteenth century, to bring India and the East into Christian civilization. It must be sadly admitted that this remains yet to be done. It is to be hoped, however, that the great work has begun in the humble schools for native men and women which have been opened under missionary auspices in various parts of the country.

A dinner at Government House on Friday, although it was attended by the Provincial Court, and supported by a military band, it was animated and cordial. The Governor was eloquent in his admiration of the United States, and Mr. SEWARD evinced a large familiarity with the history of the Portuguese in India. A throne which stands in the grand salon of the palace, although it has no occupant, the Viceregal dignity having been abolished, is still used on state occasions. What interested us more were the queer old portraits of Viceroys, Governors, Generals, Admirals and missionaries. Need I say that we carefully studied the lineaments of Vasco de Gama, Diaz, Cabral, Almeyda, Albuquerque, of Xavier and Loyola? An artistic performance of Chopin by a young secretary enchanted us with its delicate fancies.

On the 18th we visited the public institutions. The military force consists of two battalions of artillery and two of infantry, maintained at the cost of $200,000. All being natives, always loyal, they are quite enough for a territory only forty-eight miles square, with a population of 450,000. The military academy trains 150 cadets, through a course of three years. The garrison barracks and hospital are excellent. We looked into the Finance Department. The revenue is $600,000. The salaries are low, and there is no complaint of taxes. The College of Science and Medicine is conducted by eleven professors, several of whom are natives of Goa, and is well attended. There are four newspapers, three of which are conducted by natives, and all in the Portuguese language. One-third of the population is Roman Catholic, the rest are Hindoo, Mahrattas and Mahometans. The good order and perfect cleanliness which pervade the little city explain the curious fact that it supplies the foreign residents of all India with their best household servants.

We drove with the Governor to his suburban villa on the summit of the cape which divides the two rivers. The palace was formerly a monastery. Its chapels are now reception rooms and banqueting halls. Its cloisters are card and billiard rooms. The garden supplying vegetables, fruits and flowers is still retained. The site was chosen with the customary sagacity of religious communities, who seldom fail to find natural and comfortable homes for the solitude needful for meditation, and natural associations which sustain enthusiasm. The place is not less adapted to its present use. There could be no more refreshing retreat from the stagnant air and burning heat of the city than this breezy, rocky site, which breaks the ocean tides. While it looks down upon the old town and the new, half buried in palms, mangoes and cypresses, and far up the primeval river channels to their sources in the mountains, which are lost in the horizon. Our minds were crowded in the hours we passed on the turreted veranda with thoughts of the events which had transpired beneath it; of Catherine and her romantic dancers; of Goa, crowded in love at home, in honor in the far-off and misty East to make by adventure a name with which to return and wed the maiden with the "sweetest eyes ever were seen;" how, after shipwreck and amid privations and persecutions, he wrote here his Lusiad, and then turned to his native land, only to find his mistress dead, and to die himself of a broken heart in a strange country. We thought of the arrival of armed fleets from Lisbon in the now quiet bay; of the building and fortification of a great city; of native armies gathered in siege around it, of the brave and chivalrous defenders who defeated and dispersed them; of the expedition of squadrons for the conquest of India and Persia on the Red Sea, in Africa, the seas of the East, of China, and of the Moluccas in the Archipelago, and of their triumphant return laden with spoils, of the homeward dispatch of argosies loaded with spices, pearls and diamonds; of the coming in of the humble Jesuit missionaries, their fortunes and their fate, sometimes crowned with martyrdom and sometimes with receiving the martyr's crown; of the baptism of whole tribes, provinces and nations; of their subsequent relapses into their primitive idol worship; of the enterprise of the colonists on land and sea, extending the fame and sway of Portugal, always brilliant, but ending in idleness and overthrow at last when they came into collision with European rivals equally ambitious and stronger than themselves. This, which is the story of Goa, is also the history of Portuguese colonization. Of the vast empire which Portugal established in both hemispheres on the track of the great discoverer, there remains now only this little province of Goa, and the already decaying city of Macao in China, and the yet barbarian colonies of St. Paul de Loando and Mozambique in Africa. She won that empire bravely, she improved it as she could with the light she enjoyed, and she lost it chivalrously. The nations which profited by her discoveries and conquests will not deny her honor and sympathy.

An early dinner at the Captain-Major's was attended by the General and other officers of the State, including M. RIBEIRO, a poet of whom, as I am told, you are likely to hear through some translations by LONGFELLOW.

The hour of 6, the time at which tide would serve, had been appointed for our departure. Mr. SEWARD, as usual, was proceeding promptly to the wharf, but was detained for a parting demonstration. The Governor addressed him with emotion; Mr. SEWARD replied with equal feeling. The military saluted him, and then the large guns which guard the outer shoulder fired when the last of the forts had dipped its flagstaff fired its farewell guns, and the setting sun had left us only the hazy twilight of the tropics, signals were still seen waving adieux from the palace balconies and from the wharf. Whatever else of the ancient Portuguese Empire may have passed away with the decline of Imperial power, the element of chivalrous courtesy certainly remains.

The crew of the Camel is now obedient. The Hindoo helmsman steers faithfully, the ocean currents flow smoothly, the iron mountain no longer diverts the needle, while the compass has been satisfactorily adjusted. Our captaincy is pleased with itself and with us. We are equally satisfied, and go to our rest with the Bombay light shining brightly before us. Goa has been gained, and the Byculla Club is not "going to be disappointed." O. R. S.

Acquittal of a Woman Accused of Murdering Her Husband.

Mrs. RACHEL M. TEALE, after nearly two weeks' trial before the Hamilton County Court of Common Pleas, in Cincinnati, for the murder of her husband, HENRY TEALE, on the 21st of last April, was acquitted by the jury last Saturday. The Cincinnati Gazette has the following comments upon the case:

"If Mrs. TEALE were the guilty one, she was also the only mortal witness of the deed. There were thus difficulties at the outset of the trial in the lack of direct evidence, and these were complicated by the perplexing circumstances of conjugal infelicity, and the unmistakable indications that Mr. TEALE's own pistol, which was hidden in the privy, was the one used in taking him off. Another embarrassment of a sentimental nature came into the category—the false but popular feeling that were Mrs. TEALE guilty, as charged, she was justifiable under the circumstances; that provocation such would authorize a man to shoot a faithless wife hold good as authority for the woman, on the other hand, to act likewise. The difficulties that beset the case manifested themselves in the trouble to obtain a jury. Mrs. TEALE was born in Scotland. Eleven years her senior, she married Mr. TEALE, and resided with him on a farm in Kentucky. Afterward, they removed to this city and opened a small store. Mr. TEALE at the same time following the business of a newspaper carrier, in which vocation he continued until his tragic death, though the store-keeping had been abandoned. The trial was before Judge FORCE. On Friday night the case went to the jury. After the Court had been in session about an hour, on Saturday morning, the jury sent a messenger to the Court-room with the announcement that they had agreed upon a verdict. The big crowd in attendance waited with suppressed impatience the arrival of the woman in black, upon whose fate or innocence of an awful crime twelve men were about to pronounce. With bated breath the bystanders listened, and when the words 'not guilty' were Burning of the Fitchburg Railroad Freight Depot, Charlestown, Mass.—A Young Lady Burned to Death.—A Mill and Mercery in Huntingdon, Conn.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—The freight depot of the Fitchburg Railroad, located in Charlestown, was burned to-night. The Waverley House, in close proximity, suffered slight damage. Miss ADA E. ANDREWS, principal copyist in the Judge Advocate's office of the Army, was surrounded by a mass of papers of Gen. HAWKINS, and other indispensable freights, and burned to death. Her parents reside in Oswego, N. Y. Other parents in the same building narrowly escaped. The fire spread from sparks from an engine, and spread with fearful rapidity, the flames being fed by exploding oil casks. There were three buildings burned in all. They were occupied respectively by the Cheshire, Vermont and Massachusetts, and the Fitchburg Railroads. Within an hour after the alarm, the high walls of the main building fell, and the entire easterly half of the immense line of freight sheds, stretching above 2,000 feet, were level with the ground. The buildings were old, and probably not worth over $50,000, for which they were insured in Boston offices. The total loss, it is believed, will exceed $100,000, but it is impossible to give a correct estimate, as the contents of the cars in the buildings are unknown. All the books and papers in the offices were destroyed. The following insurance is given: Gen. W. WALKER & Co., on furniture worth, at stores on street, insured for $2,000 each in the Ætna and Leather and Wooden's Offices; J. T. EDMUNDS & Co., Boston, insured for $6,000 in the Phenix, of New-York; on freight, $6,000 in the Peoples', of Worcester; E. M. MUNDOCK, wood carving, &c., stored in the building, insured for $10,000 in New-England offices. The Fitchburg Corporation have large and commodious freight houses on Front-street, which remain unbroken, and their business will be continued without serious interruption.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Oct. 6.—A conflagration occurred in this city last night. The fire broke out in WILLARD, TOMLINSON & Co.'s planing mill, consuming the mill, the lumber in the yards, a brewery and several residences. The loss is estimated at $80,000.

Conference of the Mormon Church—Instructions of the Elders on Obedience to the Laws.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 6.—The semi-annual Conference of the "Church of Jesus Christ" commenced this morning. The attendance was not as large as usual. The different elders have spoken, all to the glorification of the Mormon Church, but generally the language and the statements were quite moderate. One of the Apostles remarked significantly that he was willing and so were the great bulk of the Latter Day Saints to obey every good and constitutional law enacted by the Government of our country. With the laws, however, which were designed to infringe upon his or their rights as freemen, he could not say quite so much. It is expected that BRIGHAM YOUNG, if able, will speak on Sunday. It is rumored that Gen. Q. CANNON, editor of the News, and one of the "Apostles," will be arrested to-morrow on the same charge as that against BRIGHAM YOUNG. Business is improving, and mining transactions are unusually heavy. The Silver Cloud Mine, in Camp Floyd, was sold today for $350,000.

A Panic in a Concert-Room—Thievish Miscreants Set Fire to a Curtain.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 6.—At a concert last evening in Institute Hall, by the Sunday-school of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, a large muslin curtain stretched around the hall took fire. The audience which was already crowded of women and children, became panic-stricken, and rushed to the doors, which were soon jammed so that the passageway was blocked up, and the whole persons were trampled upon and badly bruised in the efforts of the crowd to escape. The utmost excitement prevailed. Many ladies swooned, and some were badly but not dangerously hurt. The fire was promptly extinguished. It is believed that the gaslight was purposely turned against the curtain, by some evil-disposed person to create a panic for the purpose of plunder.

SOUTHERN CLAIMS.

Since the Southern Claims Commission resumed the taking of testimony on Tuesday, they have among other cases examined witnesses in chief JAMES MILLIGAN, of Pittsburg, Penn., for lumber, boxes and hams, taken by Gen. BURNSIDE's army, on the occupation of Nashville, in 1862, amounting to $7,000, and in the case of Mrs. LOUISA KEARNEY, for property taken near Alexandria, amounting to nearly $7,000. The Commission will not convene at this time to allow their Special Commissioners in the South to receive testimony in support of any claim exceeding $5,000 in amount, but claimants who have already filed claims exceeding that sum may by reducing the amount bring their cases within the jurisdiction of their resident Commissioners. No further applications for the hearing of testimony can be entertained by the Commission until after the 1st of January next.

FEE FOR REGISTERING VESSELS.

The Treasury Department has decided that the fee to be charged for a copy of a register, under the second section of the Act of 1792, is twenty cents, and not $1, as claimed in some of the ports. The law does not in express terms except copies of registers.

DEBENTURES.

Information has reached the Treasury Department to the effect that the British schooner Mary Emeline, bound from Canada to the United States with a valuable cargo, was recently found by an American steam-tug abandoned on the Lakes. She was brought into the port of Erie, Penn., in a sinking condition, and is awaiting judicial action.

THE CHEROKEES.

A letter was received at the Indian Department, today, from Col. COX, of the Commission appointed to remove the North Carolina Cherokees to the Indian Territory. He states that Friend LAKE and himself, with about 300 Cherokees, expected to leave London, Tenn., this afternoon, and would probably arrive at Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, on Monday evening last.

THE REGRADING CONVENTION.

Mr. ALEXANDER R. SHEPHERD, of this city, has been designated by Gov. COOKE as delegate from the District of Columbia to the National Improvement Convention, which meets in the City of New-York, the 11th of October next. The appointment is made in accordance with the request of Gen. W. MILLER, President of the Convention, that a representative of the District might be designated to participate in their deliberations.

THE KUKLUX.

The Organization in North Carolina "Thoroughly Cut"—Correspondence with Judge Bond.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—Gen. A. E. BURNSIDE and Special Mail Agent TURNBULL have been in North Carolina on a special mission, returned here today. They represent that the Klan among the Kuklux and their friends in the State is becoming terrible, and that as an organization the Kuklux are rapidly collapsing. When the trials began, a large number of prominent citizens came to Raleigh, among them several of the leading lawyers of the State to defend the prisoners, affecting to believe that the existence of an organization would be disproved. But the result of the trials astonished them, and a few days ago ten of the principal men addressed Judge BOND the following important letter:

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 30, 1871.

Hon. R. L. Bond, Judge United States Circuit Court:

SIR: We have the honor in the interest of the peace of the people of North Carolina to address you this note. The fact that a secret unlawful organization, called the Kuklux or Invisible Empire exists in certain parts of the State, has been manifested in the recent trials before the Court over which you preside. We condemn without reservation all such organizations. We denounce them as dangerous to good government, and we regard it the eminent duty of all good citizens to suppress them. No right-minded man in North Carolina can palliate or deny the crimes committed by these organizations, but we think if the Kuklux prosecution of the persons charged with these crimes could be continued until the November Term, it would enable us to enlist all law-loving citizens of the State to make an energetic and effectual effort for the restoration of good order. We assure you that before the November Term of the Circuit Court we believe that this unlawful organization will be effectually suppressed. In presenting these considerations to your Honor, we declare that it is our duty and purpose to exert all the influence we possess, and use all the means in our power to absolutely suppress this organization, and to secure a lasting, permanent peace to the State. The laws of the country must and shall be vindicated. We are satisfied and give the assurance that the people of North Carolina will unite in arresting, and forever obliterating an evil which brings nothing but calamity to the State. In the name of a just and honorable people, and by all the considerations which appeal to good men, we solemnly protest that these violations of law and public justice must and shall cease.

We have the honor to be, &c.,

Thos. Bragg, Wm. H. Shipp, George V. Strong, M. W. Ransom, Daniel G. Fowle, William H. Bailey, Jas. H. Batchelor, R. H. Battle, Jr., B. F. Moore, D. M. Barringer.

To this letter Judge BOND sent the following reply declining the request for a postponement:

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 4, 1871.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge at the hands of His Excellency Gov. CALDWELL the receipt of your letter asking me to postpone the trials of the cases now pending in the Circuit Court under the Enforcement act. I have given your letter the long and careful consideration to which your eminent position in North Carolina and the importance of the subject to which it relates entitled it, but I am unable to comply with your request. These cases are very numerous, and if not tried now the next term as remember the dockets as to obstruct all civil business. The city is full of witnesses summoned from long distances, who have remained here for several weeks at a large cost, and it would be a great burden to make them return here again and it would be unjust for me to send them home unless I knew they could return with the same feeling of personal security that I myself should have on my return home. This I cannot know, and though you give me assurances that before the next term of the Circuit Court the "invisible Empire" shall be effectually suppressed, it is not suppressed now, and I feel that the enforcement of the law should continue. I have come to this conclusion with some reluctance, because I am sure gentlemen who are sincere in their desire to relieve North Carolina of this disgraceful and ruinous association will use their utmost efforts to suppress it as they assure me they have the power to do, because the Court sits a week or two longer to assist them in their undertaking. I am glad to hear from you that the recent trials have manifested that this secret and unlawful organization exists in some parts of North Carolina. It can not exist but if you join in our efforts to suppress it to point out by these trials to you who are the guilty persons who compose it. I hope, gentlemen, that you will agree with me that it is best to do so. With great respect, I beg to remain, Yours, very respectfully,

HUGH L. BOND,
Judge United States Circuit Court.

To Thos. Bragg, Esq., Geo. V. Strong, Esq., and others.

MEXICO.

Revolution Against Juarez—Threatened Attacks on Matamoras and Other Frontier Cities.

MATAMORAS, Oct. 2.—There is another great revolution in Mexico, and the State of Nueva Leon takes the lead. The famous Gen. PEDRO MARTINEZ pronounced in Galiana, against the Juarez Government, and was immediately seconded by Gens. JERONIMO and TREVINO, Governor of Nueva Leon, together with all the State authorities and several other chieftains. Their combined forces are said to be marching on Camargo and Matamoras, with the view of occupying the Custom-house on the frontier. The first step taken by the authorities of Nueva Leon was to throw into prison all the employes of the Federal Government. It is expected that this movement will be seconded by the neighboring States, and that the revolution will become general. Gen. PORFIRIO DIAZ is reported to have said that he would march against those who should pronounce against the Juarez Government, but his loyalty is much doubted. Matamoras and the frontier are yet quiet, nevertheless the merchants feel very anxious about coming events. Gens. PALAINO and CORTINA have issued a proclamation to the soldiers under their respective commands, and to the citizens on the frontier in general to stand and fight for the Juarez Government. Great preparations are being made in Matamoras for the defense of the city, if it be attacked, and all the cavalry has left for the front. The telegraph is only working as far as Mier, and no further news is reported as this hour. Great excitement is reported from all parts of Mexico on account of such stirring news.

THE WEATHER.

Blizzards of Storm and Fresh Breezes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7—1 A. M.—The area of lowest pressure has advanced since Thursday afternoon from the lower lakes to the East Atlantic, and that which was central in Northern Florida is probably now off Cape Hatteras. The pressure has risen from the Ohio Valley north-westward. Rain has fallen very generally along the Atlantic coast; smoky and clear weather from Tennessee to Lake Ontario, and extending south-westward. Southeasterly winds are now reported from Missouri to Minnesota. An area of remarkably dense smoke exists at Washington, with fresh north-west winds.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably fall, with southerly winds north of Kansas and Illinois. Clear and smoky weather will probably prevail on Saturday from New-York south and west, and clearing weather in New-England.

Extensive fires still continue.

Progress of the Texas Elections.

NEW-ORLEANS, Oct. 6.—Advices from Jefferson, Texas, state that the elections passed off quietly. The vote of Marion County is 1,800, and BULLOCK's majority is 100. Nothing has been heard from the interior.

GALVESTON, Oct. 6.—The elections passed off quietly throughout the State so far as heard from, except at Groesbeck, where five negroes of the State Police murdered an old man named D. C. APPLICOHITE. Nothing reliable as to the result of the election can be had to-night. The vote polled here was small. The Democratic majority is about 1,000.

The Storm on the Gulf Coast—Disasters to Shipping.

GALVESTON, Oct. 5.—A severe storm commenced here on the evening of the 2nd. The gale as far back as Church-street was submerged for several hours. The damage is small considering the violence of the storm. Three miles of the Houston and Galveston Railroad near here are badly damaged.

NEW-ORLEANS, Oct. 6.—Five pilot-boats were driven ashore at South-west Pass in the gale of the 3d inst., including the Robert Bruce, which was totally wrecked and her crew of four were drowned.

The steamer Twelfth Era, anchored in the bay, is a total wreck. The passengers and crew were saved after clinging to the wreck all night. One negro was drowned. Other vessels were slightly damaged.

The shipping off Galveston are safe.

The town of Indianola was flooded deeper by the storm of the 2d inst. and the tide than has been known in twenty-five years.

The Memphis Races.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 6.—The first race today was the Dessie stake for three-year olds, two-mile heats, sweepstakes $100 each, only $25 if declared; $1,000 added. There were twenty-seven subscribers and five declared.

Hollywood	1 1
Mike Fink, by Lexington	2 2
Orion	3 dis.

Time—3:59, 3:45.

MILES' entry was the favorite with Hollywood second. The betting was heavy, and the knowing ones badly wrecked.

SECOND RACE.—Club purse $400, mile and repeat, for all ages:

Foster	1 1
Commerce	2 2
Demorest	3 3
Tom Corbett	5 4
Belle Aiken	4 dis

Time—1:48½, 1:49¾.

Foster was the favorite two to one. The attendance at the races was large, and the track dusty.

Local Political Gossiping.

Hon. GEORGE BOWEN has been nominated for re-election to the Senate in the Twenty-ninth District.

A Republican mass-meeting will be held at Hunter's Point Tuesday evening next. Mr. CORNELIUS WALSH, Hon. JOHN HILL and others will speak.

The Richard B. Connolly Association of the Twentieth Ward last evening indorsed the nomination of Ex-Sheriff O'BRIEN for Senator for the Seventh Senatorial District.

The Eighteenth Ward James O'Brien Association met last evening at No. 297 Avenue C. Mr. FERLY spoke in favor of the nomination of Mr. O'BRIEN as Senator.

The German-American Association of the Twenty-second Ward met last night and nominated CHARLES A. FLAMMAN for Assembly. Tammany Hall was denounced.

The Democrats of the town of East Chester held a meeting in Schuerman's Hall, Mount Vernon, on Thursday evening. Resolutions were adopted recommending the renomination of WM. CALDWELL for State Senator.

The James Winterbottom Association of the Fifth Assembly District suspended a handsome banner across Spring-street, between Sullivan and Thompson streets, last night. The banner bears the names of all the Republican candidates nominated at Syracuse.

The Fifteenth Ward Council of Political Reform will hold an adjourned meeting to-night in the small chapel of the New-York University. A large attendance of the friends of the present reform movement is expected. The meeting will open at 7½ P. M.

At the Suffolk County Republican Convention, held at Riverhead, on Thursday night, JOHN S. MABCY, of Riverhead, was nominated for Assembly, EDWARD S. GERARD was nominated Superintendent of the Poor, HENRY S. GERRY for Justice of the Sessions, and GEO. L. HUNTINGTON for Coroner.

THE REFORMATION.

Progress of the Good Work Against Corrupt City Rule.

Keyser Places His Property in the Hands of One of the Committee of Seventy—Deputy Controller Green's Efforts in Behalf of the Laborers.

Investigations are in progress in the various departments of the Reform Committee, in order to obtain evidence to strengthen the prosecutions which have been commenced, and others which are about being initiated against the plunderers of the City Treasury. Master workmen have been employed for several days in making rigid examinations of the work done in the new Court-house by the Ring contractors. The result of the investigation of Messrs. BAXTER, LEHMAN and TYRELL have already been published in the TIMES. Below is given the affidavit of Mr. MASTERTON, the contractor who built Tammany Hall. The testimony he gives is as conclusive against the Ring as anything yet given. Mr. MASTERTON, it will be seen, positively swears that he would be willing to do the work performed by GARVEY for $50,000, and that the repairs could not possibly have amounted to the original cost of the work. Mr. GARVEY received from the County $500,000 for the plastering of the Court-house, and $1,000,000 for repairing the work he had charged $600,000 for. These affidavits are to be used, it is understood, not only against the persons who received the money, but also against the officials who approved the bills and sanctioned their payment. Ex-Judge BARRETT, who is pushing the matter with great zeal, says that, by virtue of these proceedings, not only can a portion of the stolen money be recovered, but the guilty receivers be properly punished. Expert accountants are employed on the City and County accounts, making complete and thorough transcripts of them.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW-YORK ss.: JOHN H. MASTERTON, of said City, being duly sworn, says that he is a mason, and is accustomed to contract for buildings, including the plastering thereof. That he has been in business in New-York for the past fifteen years, and has built many large buildings. That among other large buildings deponent has built Tammany Hall. That deponent knows the new County Court-house building in New-York City. That the plaster-work in said new County Court-house could have been done for fifty thousand dollars, and that said sum is a very ample one with which to do said plastering. That deponent would most gladly contract to do the same for fifty thousand dollars, and give ample security for fully performing the same. That the repairs on same house it was done could not possibly have equalled the original cost.

J. H. MASTERTON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of October, 1871.

WM. H. MCDOUGALL,
Notary Public, New-York County.

The Executive Committee of the Citizens' and Tax-payers' Association held a very enthusiastic meeting last night at the corner of Twenty-second-street and Broadway. Mr. HENRY G. STEBBINS presided, and there was a full attendance. Soon after 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order. Mr. JACKSON S. SCHULTZ arose and announced the following gratifying intelligence: He said that JOHN H. KEYSER, to whom, with others, such enormous amounts have been paid from the City and County, had made an assignment to him (JACKSON S. SCHULTZ) of property estimated at $600,000, in trust, to repay out of the proceeds of the same all sums of money which he may have improperly received from the City or County of New-York, and has given full information touching his pecuniary transactions, which he wishes to be made public.

The Committees on Frauds and Accounts, and on elections rendered their reports. The Committee will meet again on Tuesday, when it is probable active measures will be inaugurated to compel the City officials to disgorge some of their plunder. It is stated that Mr. KEYSER's transactions extend as far back as 1864, the first item being one of $80,000.

JOHN J. BRADLEY says there is no doubt that GARVEY has fled.

Deputy Controller Green and the Department of Parks.

Deputy Controller GREEN has sent the following communication to the Department of Parks:

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, CONTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Oct. 5, 1871.

To the Department of Parks:

Since my communications of 28th and 29th ult. the injunction order of the Supreme Court has been so far modified as to admit of the Department raising money on assignment bonds to meet certain classes of expenditures under your Department.

The Board of Apportionment has also since those dates taken the necessary action to admit of the issue of certain assessment bonds, and I have this day deposited to the credit of the Department of Parks in the Tenth National Bank, on account (balance) of your requisition of date, 19th of June last, for Road or Public Drive (Boulevard) Fund, the sum of $100,000 to cover payment of the laboring men.

With respect to the class of bonds and stock known as Park Improvement Stock, no doubt has been expressed relative to the sufficiency of the law for its issue, it seems to me best that the necessary proceedings be at once taken by some person having a claim on your Department to submit the question, by mandamus or otherwise, to the Supreme Court. I shall do all in my power to expedite the proceedings, so that no delay may take place in obtaining a judicial ruling on the subject. I am without a reply to my communication of the 28th ult., relative to the amount of expenditures by your Department under various heads of account.

Very respectfully,

ANDREW H. GREEN, Deputy Controller.

Payment of Laborers and Policemen.

Yesterday arrangements were made to pay the small-pipe men employed on the Croton Works the arrears of wages due to them since the first of August. The amount is about $15,000, which will be disbursed by Mr. CADY today. In addition to the $100,000 appropriated on Thursday, by the Deputy Controller, for the payment of Park laborers, another $100,000 was added yesterday, which will settle all claims on this account up to the present date.

Deputy Controller GREEN having furnished the necessary funds, all the employes of the Police Department received their salaries for the month of September, yesterday, except in some few cases which were not reached.

Receipt of Taxes.

Yesterday, the sum of $237,695 79 was received for personal taxes and taxes on banking institutions. This makes a total received since the books were opened on Wednesday last of $614,229 56. It is thought that the books for taxes on real estate cannot be opened for four or five days to come, as the arrears of taxes and assessments have to be added in the books to the taxes for the present year, so that such arrears may appear on each tax-payer's bill.

About the Grand Jury.

The more the Grand Jury is scrutinized the more disgraceful are the developments. Every day brings fresh facts to light with reference to its members. Dr. THOMAS COTTMAN, who has been held up as a most respectable individual, turns out to be an ex-rebel of the most virulent type—something on the Fellows order. He was one of the original signers of the ordinance of secession in his State of Louisiana. It is not known whether he practices his profession, but he has been taken good care of by sympathizing friends in the City Government here, and enjoys a particularly fat thing in the Sewer Department. He is, of course, a man who would be perfectly unbiased in his judgment on the Hall question. We do not wish to be understood as stigmatizing every member, however.

A correspondent has called our attention to the fact that Mr. JAMES E. HEDGES, one of the Grand Jury, is by no means a Democrat nor a corrupt man. We never expressed anything to the contrary, and are well aware that there are other members of the Grand Jury who are equally honorable, but they are unfortunately in a decided minority.

Another correspondent writes us with reference to Mr. ROBERT HALL as follows:

The good cause you are battling for is too strong to meet resistance by dissembling even. In yesterday's issue you referred to a meeting connecting Mayor HALL (one of the sitting Grand Jurors) to Mayor HALL by the remotely link. There's journal states a positive statement "that one of his sons-in-law," &c. I have known the Mayor HALL returned to a long time—longing to the acquaintance whereof he is formed. He is not a brother of Mayor HALL, nor is he in any way related to the Mayor's family. Furthermore, he states that to the best of his belief he has never, up to this present writing, personally met Mayor HALL. The insertion of this correction, which Mr. HALL will at any time verify, is due alike to truth as to all parties concerned.

JOHN H. BIRD, No. 10 Broadway.

NEW-YORK, Friday, Oct. 6, 1871.

Tammany's Roughs—Their Insults and Rob Passengers on the Erie Railroad Cars.

It is stated the train on the Erie Railroad from Rochester on Thursday evening, bringing the New-York delegates home, was thrown into confusion soon after leaving Rochester by the riotous conduct of a number of the "roughs" who went to Rochester with Mr. WILLIAM M. TWEED. A number of passengers were robbed, and the most cruel outrages were perpetrated upon others. The insults and abuse offered to the peaceable passengers were intolerable, so that many of them left the train at Corning and other stations, compelled to pass the night on the way rather than expose themselves to these reckless men, over whom neither the officers of the railway nor the laws of the State had any restraining influence whatever.

Letters from Correspondents on the Investigation of the Ring.

A correspondent writes us follows concerning JOHN D. NEWMAN, whose name appeared in our list of sinecurists:

You are at a loss to find out what NEWMAN does. It is this: Every year Tammany appoints an Assessment Committee, of which DOUGLAS TAYLOR, CASPER CHILDS, or some other Tammany light, is Chairman. This Committee assesses two per cent. at least on the salaries of all employes of the City and County, (no matter what their politics may be.) NEWMAN makes his list from such assessment, and collects it, for which the Committee allow him six per cent. From this source, and his dead-head salary as an officer of the Court of Sessions, NEWMAN has acquired wealth, some of which is invested in real estate, and to which he is adding largely every year. He is generally Canvasser or Inspector of Elections for Tammany in the neighborhood of Thirty-ninth-street and Second-avenue.

This is his circular and authority for making collections:

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLICAN GENERAL COMMITTEE, TAMMANY HALL.

DEAR SIR: The Democratic General Committee of New-York are much in want of funds to pay the current and legitimate expenses of the coming State and County elections, to be held in November and December next, and solicit from you, for that purpose, a contribution of $50, which amount you are requested to pay to the collector, Mr. JOHN D. NEWMAN.

As the Committee intend making but one assessment in the two elections, and as it is vital that money should be immediately collected in order to successfully carry on this important campaign, your prompt response will greatly oblige.

Yours truly and respectfully,

Here follow the names of the Finance Committee and the Chairman of the Democratic General Committee.

Another writes: Among the names on the pay-roll I don't see MATTHEW MOORE alias Rockey, and ALLEN WOODFORD, who devotes his time and attention to the safe business. He is a clerk in the office of JAMES McBRIDE DAVIDSON, who supplied the Court-house with safes for $400,000.

Another correspondent, who appears to be well acquainted with the County Clerk's office, writes:

With regard to FREDERICK SWARTZ, temporary Clerk, who gets $2,000 a year; CHAS. SCHAFFER, who gets $1,200, and LEWIS A. LOEW, who gets $1,000, I can give you a few facts. CHAS. SCHAFFER is the uncle of CHAS. A. LOEW, the County Clerk, and LEWIS A. LOEW is his brother. SWARTZ is associated with the two in a real estate and law office at No. 600 Third-avenue. The firm is LOEW & SCHAFFER, and SWARTZ is special counsel. They do a very heavy business in the Nineteenth Ward, and besides are counsel for the Manufacturers' and Builders' Bank and the Manufacturers' and Builders' Fire Insurance Company. They are always busy and never have been known to go near the County Clerk's office, though they have never failed to draw their pay.

A disgusted Democrat writes:

EDWARD H. KENT, who is down on the list as Equity Clerk of the Supreme Court, and is paid $291 66 per month, has been traveling in Europe for over four months. He has not been seen in the City since November, 1870, and has never for an hour been in the Supreme Court.

Another correspondent says:

In relation to holding sinecure positions under Tammany Hall, you mentioned the week THOMAS LENNON, of the Water Police. Please inform your numerous readers that he is the proprietor of a negro faro game at the corner of One Hundred and Twenty-eighth-street and Third-avenue, Harlem.

A friend from Brooklyn states:

Senator GERRY's father-in-law, GEORGE H. R. LYNCH, is on the pay-roll of the Brooklyn Water Department. Commissioner BLISS has quite a number of New-York politicians on the pay-roll. Our Ring delegates boasted, before they left for Rochester, they would save Tammany, and so secure their sinecures.

A New-Yorker writes:

In looking over the list of sinecures in the Board of Public Works, I noticed the name of JOHN VAN HORN as Water Police. There is a JOHN VAN HORN in second-avenue, a maker of base-ball materials. He is a brother-in-law of Senator WM. C. CAULDWELL, and resides in Morrisania.

A correspondent states:

In May last, the several Marshals held a meeting and resolved not to serve a dispossess warrant under 50. This is an illegal fee, without any authority of law. Mayor HALL, who appointed these Marshals, is well aware of this fact. This is a hardship on a poor man who may happen to fall into a little arrears with his landlord, who finds, if he wants to remain in his little dwelling, that he cannot do so without paying all rent due, and in addition the Marshal's illegal fee of $4.

"TIM" DONOVAN says:

In your paper of yesterday you charge me with holding a sinecure position under the City Government, a prize-fighter, have bitten off a man's nose and various other disreputable acts. I do hold the position of Deputy Clerk of Fulton Market and perform the duties thereof faithfully and efficiently. I never was in a prize-fight or never bit off any man's nose.

An earnest citizen writes:

If a man wants to get bail who is in prison the Marshals charge the unfortunate individual from $5 to $10 for taking him to the District-Attorney's office or to either of the Judges' offices.

Another correspondent calls for information as follows:

Please inform a tax-payer what business relation exists between NOAH A. CHILDS, Water Purveyor and General Inspector of Pavements, and LEONARD W. JOHNSTON, contractor, or why Mr. CHILDS pays the Cape Ann Granite Company for the stone used by Mr. JOHNSTON, and if Mr. JOHNSTON does not carry his contracts to CHILDS, and do his work without the presence of any inspector, when there are two men appointed on each contract and paid by us, or if we are liable for the assessment under the above mode of doing work? By giving us information on this point you will oblige many tax-payers in the City.

THE GERMANS AND THE RING.

The Germans of the Sixteenth Ward—Co-Operation with the Committee of Seventy—Preparing for Action.

A large meeting of the Independent German Association of the Sixteenth Ward was held last night in the hall at No. 111 Seventh-avenue to perfect the organization of a newly-formed association, in opposition to Tammany Hall. The following, which explains the object of the association, is printed at the head of the membership roll, which was circulated last evening for signers:

We can only be emancipated from the shameful state of affairs now brought upon us by a number of the most unprincipled demagogues ever known in history, encouraged as they were by our own blindness and carelessness, by united co-operation of all honest citizens without distinction of party.

And we can only guard against the recurrence of similar events in future by fulfilling our duties in a conscientious and well informed manner in opposing the corrupt influence of party spirit on all such occasions as are not subordinate to party divisions, viz. Municipal, State, administration of our Municipality and our Schools.

And in exercising individual care and attention in the selection of our candidates for public offices, persons be found of ability to discharge their duties, and endowed with independence of character and unquestioned integrity.

All German citizens and American citizens of the Sixteenth Ward are therefore called to join with us and all other organizations of a similar nature to reach the desired end.

O. Zollikoffer, President; V. Fink, J. Eder, Vice-Presidents; M. Lorenz, C. Richter, Secretaries; Th. Kohn, Treasurer; A. Bauds, G. Diecks, J. Dresler, J. Finzel, H. Gerske, J. Kramer, V. Kurz, Fr. Keller, J. Links, T. Lotz, M. Mauch, Ch. Rader, O. Sommer, J. Sauer, G. Wolf, members of Executive Committee.

Mr. ZOLLIKOFFER, who presided, expressed his gratification at seeing so many present, notwithstanding the storm prevailing outside.

Dr. GERSKE addressed the meeting and said that there was but little time to do anything before the approaching election, independent of the existing political parties, from some of which late events had shown that no good could be expected. He therefore moved that a committee be appointed to act jointly with other committees, consisting of the First Senatorial District, composed of the Eighth, Ninth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth Wards, to unite upon a candidate in opposition to the candidates of corrupt Tammany. A resolution to that effect was passed, and a committee was appointed to carry the measure proposed, consisting of Dr. GERSKE, and Messrs. FINZEL, FINK and DRAPER. Arrangements were also made for a Convention on Sunday next, at the head-quarters of the Sixth Ward Association. A delegation from the Fifteenth Ward Association, headed by Dr. HOFFMAN, was in attendance, and the views of the Association were set forth with much eloquence by Dr. HOFFMAN, who spoke of the necessity of the German citizens in the present emergency and what the Germans of the Fifteenth Ward proposed "to do about it." A series of resolutions adopted at one of their meetings in the Ward was read, which embodied the ideas and proposed plan of action of the organization whose delegate addressed. A committee of seven was then appointed, composed of Messrs. BAUMAN, MUNCH and FINK, to confer with the Committee of Seventy upon the subject of a united and effective plan of action in the present campaign against corruption. The meeting soon after adjourned.

The Twentieth Ward Germans.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of German Republicans of the Twentieth Ward was held last evening at the Park House, No. 811 West Fifty-third-street, Mr. GROS, President. Mr. S. SCHWAB addressed the meeting at length, denouncing the frauds of Tammany Hall, and exposing the corruption of our Municipal authorities. Mr. SPAULDING followed, and he called on all citizens who had the real interests of the City and State at heart, to rescue this City from the hands of the corrupt men who had so long held it in their grasp, draining its Treasury, piling up its debt and increasing the burden of taxation to an intolerable degree.

that is not a "Bird" in the complicated sense of the word. It will be noticed that in many of these applications there was not a pretense of complying with the provisions of the treaty, there being no averment concerning the status of the applicants, a defect which, the Commissioners say, the most cursory examination by the officials at Washington could not have failed to discover. GUERON testifies that he cannot remember that any oath was administered by Justice TYLER on any of the applications certified by that person, and he swears positively that no oath was administered to him by WEBB on the applications which were taken by WEBB to Washington, and signed there. In February, 1865, WEBB and GUERON were together in this city, and WEBB had with him a large number of applications for scrip, which needed other signatures to make them complete. GUERON could sign these applications and witness them, while WEBB could, in office, if within the bounds of his agency, verify them, but two identifying witnesses were required. At this point, JOHN W. BELL, a respectable citizen of La Point, Wis., was in Washington, and was offered an interest in the scrip if he would become the second identifying witness. He declined, but on examination, believing himself to be acquainted with some of the parties, he witnessed for them, to the number of 100 applications. PETER ROY, a half-breed, from Lake Superior, and well acquainted in that region, was also approached for the same purpose. He consented to look over the roll and vouch for those he might know. After examination he informed WEBB that none of the parties were entitled to scrip under that treaty. WEBB requested silence, and took the roll away. Two of the applications witnessed bore evidence of the forgery of CHAPMAN's name. Five applications for scrip were also issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, without any application having been made, upon the personal request of WEBB, and the parties in whose names they were issued are full-blooded Indians! This is sustained by the affidavits of the parties. In the manner thus set forth WEBB secured scrip covering 15,920 acres of land, which he disposed of to the parties, receiving from them $2.50 per acre, and one-half of whatever might be realized from the same over and above that sum. In any event, he realized not less than two hundred dollars from each piece, while all expenses in procuring it did not probably average $25 on each certificate.

Coincident with the renewal of this business at Lake Superior a similar movement began at St. Paul, and this forced construction of the treaty was again put to its utmost stretch. Applications of any mixed bloods of the Chippewas, without reference to their bands or residence, husband and wife, each being regarded the head of a family; some persons who are said to have received Sioux scrip, and in two instances white married women were all induced to make application. In this way about 150 applications were taken. In this list are four instances in which duplicate applications were filed for each individual and the scrip issued thereon. The parties concerned were examined under oath, and swear that they were wholly ignorant of this transaction, and never derived any profit therefrom. The Commissioners state that they have been able to trace but one of these pieces of scrip, and that was in the hands of the late Commissioner of Indian Affairs, WM. P. DOLE. Most of these applications were by mixed-bloods of the Chippewas of the Mississippi and Pelager bands, and by such members of the Pembina and Red Lake bands as were residing in the vicinity of St. Paul. The Commissioners say they have the evidence of the persons who signed certain applications as witnesses that they have no knowledge of or acquaintance with J. B. BARNETT, late United States Indian Agent; and yet the applications have the certificate of BARNETT that he is personally acquainted with the parties, and that their statements are entitled to full credit and belief. ISAAC VAN EPTEN, of St. Paul, was the attorney who did the principal part of this business in that vicinity. With a large number of the applicants he made an agreement to procure their scrip and charge them twenty dollars for his services, or retain it, paying them fifty dollars for the same, while at the same time he knew that the scrip was selling in St. Paul at not less than three dollars per acre. The Commissioners proceed to give a schedule of forty-nine applications, showing how much was realized by the mixed bloods in each case—generally from seventy to forty dollars—and in some cases nothing. They add that in some cases as high as a hundred dollars was realized, but that these were the cases of the more intelligent, who knew the nature of the proceedings.

In the Spring of 1866 certain parties, residents of St. Paul and vicinity, determined to visit the Red River country, largely inhabited by the mixed bloods of the Pembina bands of the Chippewas, and take their applications for scrip under the treaty. As yet no operator had been bold enough to claim that this band, separated from the Lake Superior Chippewas by the entire breadth of the State of Minnesota, never within the memory of man having had any tribal relations with them, could be embraced within the provisions for the mixed-bloods of Lake Superior. Accordingly, a notary public, H. S. DONALDSON, and an interpreter visited that region, and made diligent search for the half-breeds of either sex, without regard to marital relations, and often with a disregard to age. After exhausting Minnesota, DONALDSON went down Red River to Fort Garry, Winnipeg, and other places in the British possessions, taking applications without scruple, and administering the oaths himself, although only a notary public for the State of Minnesota. He procured about 415 applications, which were turned over to his employer, H. W. KITTSON, of St. Paul, who forwarded them in whole or in part, to Washington, and on them Commissioner DOLE issued 165 pieces of scrip, covering 8,480 acres of lands. At the time said applications were taken, an agreement was made with the applicants by which they were to pay fifty dollars for procuring their scrip, or were to permit Mr. KITTSON to retain the same by paying fifty dollars therefor. Had this arrangement been observed, the Commissioners say it would have been the most favorable of any made for the half-breeds, beside being very profitable for the operators. "But," they add, "we regret to say that he (KITTSON) has not fulfilled this agreement, and that we failed to find more than two of these mixed bloods who have received one dollar upon said agreement, although we have some reason to believe that there are some others who have been paid, in whole or in part, what he promised them." As another means of facilitating the fraud, the parties making the applications were at the same time required to execute two powers of attorney in blank, one authorizing the receiving of the scrip from the Indian Bureau, and the other the selling, locating, and the conveying of the lands located. The evidence shows that in scarcely any case did the parties executing these papers have any idea of the nature of the proceeding. No explanation was made to them, and the Commissioners say such papers cannot by any process of reasoning be held to be of any binding force, it always having been held that such powers were without validity. They, therefore, say that the inquiry will naturally suggest itself, how did these various parties succeed in inducing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to issue scrip in such quantities upon papers which, if not on their face fraudulent or defective, would have been so found upon a slight inquiry! The Commissioners then proceed to answer their own inquiry, and as the charge is very grave and very explicit, it is best to give it in their own language:

"We regret to say that we have discovered clear proofs of the complicity of WILLIAM P. DOLE, then Commissioner, in this matter. A considerable portion of the scrip was given to him as a consideration for issuing it, and where an attorney or agent declined to charge it with him, he refused to issue scrip upon the applications filed. This can be substantiated, if need be, by the oaths of ISAAC VAN EPTEN, N. W. KITTSON, FRANKLIN STREET, and others."

In further proof of these charges, the Commissioners set forth the pleadings in a suit brought by WM. P. DOLE, as plaintiff, against one J. P. WILSON, defendant, in the District Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota. It appears that in April, 1867, DOLE sold to WILSON twenty-eight pieces of this scrip, covering 2,240 acres of land, for the sum of $2,720, or $1 per acre. WILSON was to pay for this scrip out of the proceeds of a claim of $10,000 which he held against the Government, failing in the collection of which he was to pay the said sum absolutely. He never paid for the scrip, whereupon, in March, 1870, DOLE brought suit to recover. WILSON sets up in his answer, among other things, the fraudulent issue and valueless character of the scrip, and that he "is informed, and believes that the plaintiff never paid or gave any consideration for the said certificates or scrip, except his services in locating or delivering to other parties who were not entitled thereto. A quantity of like certificates," &c., &c. The Commissioners add: "We are well advised that the averments of Mr. WILSON's answer are correct, and true." OSCAR TAYLOR, of St. Cloud, sent to the Indian Bureau the applications of five persons, named above. After some time, he received a reply from a clerk in the Bureau that if he would permit the retention of two of the five pieces they would issue on the whole. TAYLOR refused and the scrip was not issued.

From 1865 to 1868 no scrip was issued. In 1868 the 310 applications remaining in the hands of H. W. KITTSON and his associates were placed in the hands of FRANKLIN STREET, a resident of Georgetown, D. C., to lay before Commissioner A. G. TAYLOR, of the Indian Bureau. The Commissioner issued scrip on all the applications, notwithstanding the fact that many of them were defective in form, and the more important fact that probably not one of the his applicants had any claims under the treaty. This negligence of duty has cost the Government in this instance 24,000 acres of the most valuable lands in the North-west. Commissioner TAYLOR also assumed the power to extend the provisions of the treaty by indorsing across the face of each piece that this scrip could be laid upon any unsurveyed land in the United States.

The Commissioners then review at length their efforts to carry out the instructions of the Secretary of the Interior, to ascertain who were still beneficiaries under the several treaties. They made personal examinations of the parties in every instance where it was possible, and they submit a list of the applications in each case, with the evidence taken in regard to each. This labor led to the discovery of the extraordinary loose manner in which applications had previously been received. It was evident in many instances that the parties applying did not originally comprehend the averments they made in the application, neither as to age, citizenship or tribal relation. They received, under the treaty of 1854, 495 applications, and under the treaty of 1863 there were received 723 applications, all of which have been adjudged by the strict construction of the respective treaties. They also submit a schedule of the names of parties who, according to instructions of Hon. J. D. COX, former Secretary of Interior, made personal application to locate their claims under the treaty of 1854, for Lake Superior scrip, at the Land-office in St. Cloud. Nearly all these persons came into St. Cloud with one of the "Red River trains," a long procession of carts that come annually laden with furs from the North-west and from the British Possessions. These were taken in charge by their "friends," brought to the Land-office, where they subscribed and swore to applications, were identified in due form, located their eighty acres, and immediately conveyed it to the "friends," who had so kindly informed them of the bounty of a generous government, and receiving in turn from fifteen to forty dollars each, they went their way to their carts and their homes in British America! The Commissioners say that in these 118 successful applications, they find, after the most diligent search, the name of only one man who belonged to the Chippewas of Lake Superior in 1854, and he had already received his scrip under this treaty. One person in this list, PASCAL BELGARD, is a member of the Manitoban government, and never pretended to have any rights under this treaty. He was approached and offered fifteen dollars for his name; he distinctly declared he was not a proper claimant, but was told it did not matter, and so he took the fifteen dollars, and somebody else took the eighty acres of land.

The Commissioners conclude their able and searching report with a number of recommendations, among which are these: That Congress should prohibit the receiving of any applications for scrip under the Treaty of 1854, at La Point, Wis., with the Chippewas of Lake Superior, at any land office, until the merits of such application have been decided and the bounty granted by special act of Congress in each case; that immediate action be taken upon the entries at the Land offices at St. Cloud and Duluth, as specified, and that said entries be cancelled, not one of the applicants having been found entitled; that in future treaties with the Indians, no provision of scrip shall be made a part of the consideration by the Government, the provisions of the Homestead law being sufficient for all purposes; and that immediate steps be taken to secure the Government against loss by cancelling all entries made at the different land offices on applications for scrip found illegal, for which the patent has not yet been issued. In conclusion the Commissioners say:

As to what course should be pursued, if any, to secure the punishment of parties to the frauds which your Commission has disclosed, we do not feel called to express an opinion, further than to suggest that the interests of all true government, both of its honor and justice in coming time, seems to require that such flagrant violators of the sanctity of oaths of purpose, and forgery and embezzlement, should not be permitted to escape the mark of condemnation and punishment; and especially do we hold it important that an officer of the Government, made a guardian of the nation's wards, should not be permitted to enjoy with impunity the fruits gained by such crimes at the expense of his wards.

The report is signed by HENRY S. NEAL, Commissioner, S. N. CLARK and EDWARD P. SMITH, Special Commissioners and Indian Agents. Rarely has there been a corrupt phase of Indian affairs more thoroughly ventilated, and this is simply an instance of what prevailed under the former system of management in Indian affairs. The results of the investigation are also a further evidence of the determination of this Administration to expose fraud and corruption wherever it is found. CYMON.

THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

A New Bishop Consecrated—Foundation of a New Diocese in Pennsylvania—General Business.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6.—In the Episcopal Convention, this morning, service was read by Rev. Doctors PAYNE, of Albany, and CRAIK, of Kentucky. After reading and correcting the journal, Dr. SCHENCK, of Brooklyn, from the Committee on Consecration of Bishops, submitted a report and resolutions supporting testimonials, and consenting to the consecration of Rev. WILLIAM BELL WHITE HOWE, D. D., as assistant Bishop of the diocese of North Carolina, which were accepted and adopted. Dr. HALSEY, of New-York, from the Committee on Canons, submitted a report on a proposed amendment to section one, canon ten, title, relative to ministers ordained in foreign countries. The intention of the amendment which was offered by Dr. FRANKLIN, of Indiana, was to give the clergy of the Mother Church of England the same rights in every parish of the Church in the United States that our own clergy enjoy. The Committee reported the proposed amendment inexpedient. Discussion ensued, Dr. FRANKLIN urging the adoption of the proposed amendment, Drs. HAIGHT, PADDOCK and others sustaining the report. A motion by Dr. FRANKLIN, that this House adopt the amendment, notwithstanding the report of the Committee, was lost by a large vote. Dr. HAWKES, of Virginia, Chairman of the Committee on New Dioceses, submitted a report, with a resolution that this House concur in the action of the House of Bishops communicated yesterday, consenting to and ratifying the formation of the proposed new Diocese within the Diocese of Pennsylvania, to take effect on the 1st day of November next, the name of said new Diocese to be determined by the Convention thereof with the consent of the Bishop of Pennsylvania. Rev. Dr. SPAULDING, of Pittsburg, moved to strike out that portion of the report requiring the consent of the Bishop to the name of the new Diocese. A general and protracted debate ensued, involving the right of a Bishop, or the primary Convention of a new diocese, or a general Convention, to name a new diocese, or prescribe the time of its coming into existence; and motions were made to amend and recommit the report. The whole subject was finally disposed of by striking out the report of the Committee, as submitted, and adopting, as a substitute, that the House concur in Message No. 3, of the House of Bishops, as to this House. The Message received yesterday commends and ratifies the formation of a new diocese within the limits of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, to be composed of all that part of said Diocese outside the counties of Philadelphia, Delaware, Chester and Bucks. A resolution was adopted that, the House of Bishops concurring, this Convention accepts the invitation of the Board of Missions to unite with the Board in celebrating, on Thursday next, the fiftieth anniversary of the missionary organization of the Church, as a missionary jubilee. The celebration will be by religious services. The Secretary then read the testimonials of Dr. HOWE, Assistant Bishop-elect of South Carolina. The roll of delegates was called and each proceeded to sign the testimonials, at the conclusion of which the Convention adjourned till 10 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.

PRAIRIES IN FLAMES.

One Hundred and Fifty Miles Swept by Fire—Men, Women and Children Fleeing for Their Lives—Immense Loss of Property of all Kinds.

From the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer, Oct. 5.

On Thursday afternoon or Friday morning last, the prairie to the south of Breckinridge, the terminus of the main line of the St. Paul and Pacific Road, on the Red River, took fire, and fanned by a high wind which prevailed at the time, spread with a frightful rapidity. No person except those who have lived upon the immense prairies of the West can form any idea what a fearful, awe-inspiring, terrific sight it is to see the fire run, rise over hundreds of miles of territory, covered only with fuel to feed the insatiate monster, which travels with the speed of the wind, devouring everything in its course. Any attempt to describe the grandeur of such a sight would be worse than useless. Starting at first from a small beginning, the flames gradually spread out, gathering force with every gust of wind, constantly widening their course, until, with mad riotous fury they leap and plunge in every direction, licking up everything in their march, like a very demon of destruction, until they remind the awe-inspired beholder of that scene which the children of Israel beheld, when they were led by a "pillar of the cloud by day," and a "pillar of fire by night." At such a time everything living, whether man or beast, flies in terror, for it is worse than useless to contend with the fiery monster whose breath "burneth like an oven."

Such a scene the residents of our State west of the "Big Woods," along the line of the St. Paul and Pacific Road, have witnessed during the past two or three days. From a small beginning near somewhere near the Eastern boundary of the State, the fire spread until it reached the "Big Woods," 150 miles from the point of starting. In striking the woods it was not stayed in its course, but the flames seizing upon the dry underbrush, and from thence to the tall trees of the forest, it extended its line for a distance of fifteen miles in the heavy timber, until it reached Smith Lake. When once fairly under headway in the timber, the scene is described as grand beyond the power of pen or pencil to picture. Roaring, crackling, with a sound that could be heard for miles, the flames tore their way, leaving behind a blackened, smoking, desolate waste to mark their onward march. Everything in their course was destroyed, namely, grass and hay-stacks, the corn-fields, fences, and, in some instances we have heard of, the rude homes and scanty household goods of the settler, all fell a prey to the insatiate monster. The terror-stricken people fled, leaving all their worldly possessions behind, thankful to escape with their lives.

On Saturday morning the flames began to approach the line of the St. Paul and Pacific Road at different points. But few supposed the danger to be so serious or so imminent, and delayed too long the means by which they could have warded off at least a portion of the damage. Such was the case with the men in charge of DE GRAFF & CO.'s warehouse, at the terminus of the line on the St. Paul and Pacific Road, some twenty miles this side of Breckinridge. They supposed there was no danger, as the buildings were situated on the opposite side of the railroad track, and the flames would have to make a leap of some forty feet to reach them. They did not calculate upon the force of the coming whirlwind of fire, and the buildings, together with all their contents, fell an easy prey to the flames.

Leaping the road (and at different points setting fire to the ties,) the flames sped onward with the fleetness of the wind. The passenger-train that left here on Saturday morning for Morris, arrived safely at the station, although the employes and passengers on the train were almost suffocated with the smoke and heat, and when it reached the depot the cars were filled with the cinders and ashes of the prairie grass. The whole country for miles and miles was covered with a dense volume of smoke, and the air was filled with the dying embers of grass, shrubs, &c.

All day on Sunday the fire raged with unabated fury, and yesterday morning the passenger-train from Morris reported the road throughout the line of fire for miles on each side of the road—that in the "Big Woods," between Darwin and Smith Lake, being especially grand and terrific. The fire had crossed the road, and was still sweeping. That in the woods would probably extend to Crow River, where its course would be stayed, but that on the prairie will probably sweep far northward unless a providential rain puts a stop to its ravages.

The wide scope of territory over which the fire has extended and the excitement incident thereto prevent us from giving anything like an estimate of the damage done. We have learned only of a portion of the losses immediately along the line of the road.

D. LEE, has a loss in buildings, goods, &c., cannot fall short of $5,000. Fortunately their supplies had been allowed to run down, as they are nearly through work on the line of the road, and in a couple of weeks will remove their quarters to the Brainard branch, or it would have been far more serious. They had no insurance.

A Swede, (name unknown,) who lived within sixteen miles of Willmar, came down on the train as far as Long Lake yesterday, to seek aid from some friends and relatives at the latter place. Everything he had in the world was destroyed, including a team of horses, yoke of oxen, three cows, grain, farming implements, &c. He and his family had a narrow escape with their lives.

HENRY GAGER, of St. Cloud, well known in this city, was returning from Fort Abercrombie with five fine horses. The flames overtook him, and seeing his only safety lay in facing them, he headed his horses for the wall of fire, and dashed through, burning his overcoat from his back, and injuring his horses to such an extent that they died soon after reaching Morris. Narrowly Mr. GAGER escaped with only a few burns. He is an old hand on the prairies, and holding his breath swallowed no flame.

A mile or two behind Mr. GAGER was a man driving a flock of some 150 sheep. Neither man nor sheep had been heard from at last accounts. The sheep may be roasted, but we think the sheep undoubtedly had their "mutton cooked."

On Sunday Mr. CAVENDER, the conductor of the Morris train, went out some two miles on the prairie with a companion or two. They saw the fire approaching in the distance, but did not suppose there was any danger. They did not calculate upon its rapid march, and, turning too late to fly, would have perished had they not, fortunately, matched with them, with difficulty, they set a "back fire," and, following it up, they stood among the smoking embers while the roaring blast swept by them at a safe distance. Mr. DAVENPORT, an assistant engineer on the road, had his camp, at Groton Station, together with all his instruments, clothes, &c., burned.

The loss to the St. Paul and Pacific Road, so far as we have learned, was confined to the burning of a few ties on the track, (which have been replaced,) and the burning of an amount of wood—how much unknown. None of the trains have been delayed, as the portion of the track injured was repaired on Sunday, and all the trains made their regular time yesterday.

It is impossible to estimate the loss caused by this wide-spread conflagration. At last accounts the fire was still raging north of the line of the road, and where it will be stopped cannot be told. We very much fear that when the full particulars of the loss are known, it will show the destruction of immense amount of grain, hay, fences, &c., &c., in the territory over which the destroying element has swept and is still sweeping.

Several Towns Destroyed—Great Damage Occasioned—Loss of Life.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 6.—The great prairie fire is still raging with unabated fury, although a slight rain of yesterday arrested its progress a little for the time. Its course is south-east, and up to last accounts it had reached nearly as far south as the Iowa border, and eastward as far as the Minnesota River, which it is hoped will stay its further progress. A high wind yesterday drove the fire forward with lightning rapidity, and it was burning fiercely in the big woods around Glencoe, Lesueur, Mankato, and New-Ulm. Reports of the ravages of the fire-fiend are coming in constantly, though they are evidently exaggerated. The losses, so far as positively known, are confined to houses, barns, fences, hay, wheat, and live stock. Only two lives are known to have been lost, that of a Swede named CONNERNT, of Kandijohnt County, and a man, name unknown, who started from the same country with a drove of cattle for Fort Geary, and was overtaken by the fire. There is no means of ascertaining the amount of damage done owing to the large tract of country which the fire has swept and its maddening nature, but it must be very heavy. Many small towns have been completely destroyed, and solitary farm-houses in the track of the fire have almost invariably been burned to the ground. The amount of suffering must necessarily be great, as many farmers have lost everything, homestead, live stock and crops, with a long Winter close upon them.

Sweeny's Rebel.

From the Binghamton Daily Republican.

The Assistant District-Attorney of New-York, "Hon." "Col." J. R. FELLOWS, is one of the chaste (and spotted) representatives of the Tammany thieves at Rochester. This man is a prominent friend of Boss TWEED, and was never yet known to repent for his traitorous conduct during the rebellion. It was he who, on the evening of the July riots, took occasion to publicly sneer at the vindication of the rights of American citizens. He is a fit colleague for such blacklegs as GEORGE MITCHELL and NICHOLAS MULLER.

THE DETECTIVE FUND.

Action Against the Chief of Police and Two Detectives of San Francisco and the Sureties Thereon, for the Recovery of $40,000—Character and Antecedents of the Plaintiff.

Suit was commenced in the Fourth District Court, San Francisco, on Friday, Sept. 29, by BUENAVENTURA PEREDA, a Spaniard, against CAMILLO MARTIN, Spanish Consul, P. CROWLEY, Chief of Police, and J. W. LEES, Captain of the detective force, to recover $35,000 in bonds, gold coin, notes and securities, which he says, they unlawfully withheld from him, and an additional sum of $5,000, by way of a penalty for the same. The Alta says:

The suit is one of the most singular and extraordinary that has ever been commenced in any of our State Courts, and throws open some of the details of a daring and extensive robbery. The complaint states that on the 16th of September, 1871, the plaintiff was possessed of $4,300 in gold coin, $12,300 in notes of the Bank of Havana, a draft for $9,000 in favor of the plaintiff, drawn by MIAS, FERNOL, & CO., merchants at Santiago, Cuba, on PARRIS, BORRAS & CO., of Cuesta, in Spain; a bill of exchange drawn by the same firm in favor of GERTRUDES SARTORIO, on PARRIS, BORRAS & CO., for $3,000; a receipt, or acknowledgment in writing, executed by FELIX TAS CAWAS to plaintiff, at Panama, for $8,000, gold; a gold snuff-box, value $400, and a portfolio and other articles of jewelry, of the value of $35,000, gold coin. The complaint states that the defendants wrongfully, and by force, took said money and effects from the possession of the plaintiff, and still retain them to his damage in the sum of $5,000. He demands judgment for that sum and for $35,000, the value of the property taken.

The extraordinary character of PEREDA's complaint led to the supposition, of course, that the Chief of Police and Detective LEES had got their hands on a large amount of property which they had reason to believe was stolen, and that which remained to be told in connection with the suit promised to be more interesting than the story set forth in the complaint.

It seems that some time in March last the Spanish Government was robbed of $600,000. The robbery took place in this city, and the money was taken from a Pay-master of the Spanish Army. It was in a safe, and was in charge of a guard. There were four men engaged in the robbery, who broke open the safe and carried off its contents, and, it is said, divided the plunder, each taking an equal share. Information of the robbery reached this city on the 27th of June, with a description of the parties who were suspected to have committed the act. But PEREDA came in advance of the news. He arrived here on the 5th of June, having come overland, and put up at the Occidental Hotel, where he registered his name as Don Rafael Zunzagde de Castro. On the 11th of June he took passage on one of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamers, and went to China. On the 17th of September he returned by the same conveyance, and has since remained in the city. On the 27th of June, as already stated, information of the robbery and other particulars reached the Chief of Police. A search was immediately instituted for PEREDA, and it was found that he had left for Lima. His return was closely watched, and immediately upon his arrival the detectives were aware of the fact. Owing to the international relations existing between this country and Spain, the usual course pursued in such cases was not followed, and on the 14th of September Capt. LEES had made negotiations with PEREDA, by which he agreed to hand him over the money in his possession. CAMILLO MARTIN, Spanish Consul, was cognisant of all the transactions between Capt. LEES and PEREDA. On the 14th of September, PEREDA accompanied Capt. LEES to the office of Mr. MARTIN, and in his presence and the presence of Chief CROWLEY, voluntarily handed over the gold, drafts, bills of exchange, and other valuables set forth in the complaint to Capt. LEES, for the Spanish Government. In the presence of the gentlemen named, PEREDA was distinctly informed that he should consider the act entirely voluntary on his part, and he declared that his act was voluntary. He also signed in the same voluntary manner a stipulation of transfer, in which he sets forth that he obtained the money from a Boy on the streets of Santiago, that he believed the money was stolen, and that it belonged to the Spanish Government. Chief CROWLEY and CAMILLO MARTIN were present when the money was turned over, for the protection of Capt. LEES, and they are conversant with all the facts and circumstances relating thereto. Capt. LEES at once formally notified the Spanish Consul that he held the money for the use of the Spanish Government, and Mr. MARTIN has so advised his Government. Although the money was transferred from PEREDA's possession to that of Capt. LEES on the 14th of September, the drafts and other papers were not indorsed, and were, of course, worthless. Next day Capt. LEES called upon him, and in the counting-house of a most respectable firm and in the presence of one of the principals, PEREDA indorsed the drafts, &c., and made them payble to the order of Capt. LEES. BUENAVENTURA PEREDA, it is said, was a Sergeant in the Spanish Army, which, if true, would make his connection with the robbery more suspicious. Having got the money without much toil, he appears not to have valued it very highly. He says he was robbed of a large sum by his servant in Chicago, and when in this city on his first visit he lost $5,000 in an investment, for which he holds a receipt. He advanced the money to another for speculative purposes, and that other has fled. The trial of the case will be watched with interest, and it will no doubt develop facts in connection with the history of the plaintiff, which, until then, must remain in obscurity.

LAWLESSNESS IN TENNESSEE.

Significant Meeting in Winchester, and Some Plain Talk.

We published yesterday details of a meeting in Lexington, Ky., to take measures to put down lawlessness in that neighborhood. Today we have an account, given by a Democratic paper, of a similar meeting of citizens of Franklin County, Tennessee, at Winchester, on Monday, 2d inst., to take action with regard to the recent disorders in that vicinity, resulting in the assassination and murder of several persons by desperadoes in gauge and in disguise. After the appointment of a Chairman, Hon. A. S. MARRAN, of Nashville, was invited to the stand, who spoke substantially as follows: The reported acts of violence in this county—the taking of DOBSON out of the County Jail and hanging him—then the killing of DOZ, the assassination of WEAVER and HORTON, and the murder of the negroes by the hands of disguised men on last Wednesday night, taking them out of jail and out of the hands of the law, made a case against the county, he said, which can only be met by confession and action. Resolutions will be of no avail. A general condemnation by the people, which he found to be the case, will not avail. The country demanded of the people of this county that the offenders shall be brought to justice. The perpetrators of such crimes as these, with vigilance, can be discovered, and to assume that they cannot is to disorganize society, and put every man on his own defense, and make him sole protector of his life, family and property. A higher consideration than fear of military, or the effect upon parties, should move the people to action now. You owe it to civilization and to the cause of civil liberty to bring these offenders to justice. No people was ever more delicately situated than we are; and upon no people was there ever a more imperious demand to obey the law. We have been successful in a great rebellion—a rebellion which made perfect rebels instead of making patriots—according as the world decides the question by success or failure. All agree that there is a strong tendency now to a central government, and that we are in great danger of losing our local or State Governments, if we AXE cause or pretext for such a radical change in our form of Government has hitherto been the assumed lawlessness of the South, and hitherto we have met these charges with these answers: First, we said the accounts of crime were greatly exaggerated; and secondly, we said: Let us have our own affairs in our own control, putting our own people in office, and we will correct these abuses. Having made this pledge, it becomes us, now that we have control in Tennessee, to keep it and be worthy of the trust. To do this, we must make no distinction between the commission of crime by one or the other party.

At the conclusion of this speech, Mr. COLYAR further suggested that resolutions would do no good—but he desired to know if the people would stand by the Sheriff in anything he would do? The meeting was a very large and orderly one. The Court-house and yard were crowded, and with one voice, that seemed to come from every heart, the meeting decided to stand by the Sheriff in anything he would do. Thereupon the Sheriff summoned a large number of citizens and gave notice that he would start the next morning to the neighborhood of Hoskerville, whence the perpetrators of the late crimes are supposed to have come.

THE CINCINNATI FOUNTAIN.

Inauguration of the Great Park Fountain—A Gala Day.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—The inauguration of the famous bronze fountain, known as the "Tyler-Davison Fountain," the gift of HENRY PROBASCO, Esq., to Cincinnati, has made this a gala day in the city. Large trains on all the roads are bringing thousands of strangers from all parts of the country. The spectators began to arrive at the Square early this morning, and by 10½ o'clock the entire space bounded by Main and Vine streets was packed with people. Seats were erected along both sides of Fifth-street, from Walnut to Vine, and a large number on the Esplanade were filled. The windows and tops of houses were crowded, many windows were disposed of as high rents. Temporary structures were erected over the sidewalks, and soon occupied; while up and down the street the people thronged everywhere. The distinguished invited guests met at noon, formally at 11 o'clock. Addresses were made by Most Rev. Archbishop PURCELL, Gov. HAYES, Hon. W. S. GROSBECK and others. The fountain was presented to the city by Mr. PROBASCO, and received by Mayor DAVIS. At 12:30 the fountain was unveiled and the water turned on. Then the bells commenced ringing, to which the church bells made prompt response. The Bloomfield bells also joined in the chorus. The magnificent work was fully secured attention and the great multitude broke out in shouts, which were repeated again and again as the crowd received fresh inspiration from the spectacle. During the exercises five tiers of scaffold properly secured against accident fell, carrying with them the occupants to the ground. Fortunately no serious injury resulted, and quite a number slightly. Mrs. ROTH, wife of CHARLES G. ROTH, of the St. Nicholas Hotel, had her leg broken.

THE FAIR.

Brief Notice of the Institute Exhibition—Novel Objects on Much Miscellaneous Display—What to See and What to See It.

The American Institute Fair is now at the zenith of its popularity. From morn to night a steady stream of visitors flows in, and the vast area of the Rink is kept constantly filled with a moving mass of pleased and wondering humanity. Perhaps the best time for a visit, or, at least, the time when the Rink and its contents are seen to the greatest advantage, is the evening. Then the spacious hall is brilliant with lights, and the thousand objects of art displayed glitter and flash with added lustre.

Entering from Third-avenue, the first stands are found to be occupied by a display of artists' materials, microscopes, microscopes, watches and jewelry, the last being so tempting that a throng of admiring visitors is constantly to be found around there. Here are time-pieces of all kinds, from the plain silver watch of the value of $20, to the pocket chronometer, which is priced at $350. Here, too, are several glass balls suspended from the ceiling, with figures and hands, but nothing more, or, at least, nothing that is perceptible. Yet the hands move and keep good time. They are a perpetual source of wonder to all not learned in horology. The secrets of their construction, we believe, is to be found in the hands of pointers, the small knobs at the end of which contain some concealed mechanism. Here, too, is an organ of novel construction and excellent tone. Passing on, the visitor enters the grand hall, in which a couple of thousand people may wander without coming in inconvenient contact with each other. First, perhaps, the attention will be attracted by silver and silken fabrics, and by articles of domestic use. Next comes a perfect museum of pretty design and novel construction; then we arrive at the stand where half a dozen young women are busily engaged in making CASSIN and FRANCE. This stand is always surrounded by a throng of visitors, as the workwomen seize the silken threads, turn and twist them, and then display their skill in the product of work. Passing on we come to the great fountains, with their splashing waters, and cool green water-plants, and the orchestra, discoursing some excellent music. Stands of potted and preserved meats come next. Among the latter is some Texas beef, put up in four and eight-pound cans, and said by those who have tried it to be excellent. Adjoining, and in the rear, ices, candies, linen and woolen fabrics, ventilating gaiters, boots and shoes, stoves, collars, and a thousand other things which call for no special mention may also be found here.

A little further on are agricultural implements, mingled with the strange implements of war, swords, pistols, muskets and rifles, gay with ribbons, and strangest of all, MOSES' patent electric railway, a circular road, around which runs a little carriage, the motive power being electricity. Here, too, is the man who sells "fourteen tools in one, Sir"—a really ingenious implement, combining a hammer, pincers, file, turn-screw, and we hardly know what besides. But the "electric burglar-alarm" attracts attention, and we have seen a crowd of men, in the prime of life, and, we should be sorry to say, prejudiced persons perhaps, to often cause mere alarm to those who have it in their houses than to the burglars, and to wake one up at most unseasonable hours by something or other about it having got wrong. It is however, doubtless a useful invention, provided only it can be made to work practically. Some models of patent locks, safes, doors, sinks, and some bridges that cannot be broken, are also on view. It is to be hoped that both will soon replace all others of the kind. Passing an array of boilers and steamers we enter the machinery-room. Here is a saw that cuts out in the block toys, such as dolls' chairs, couches and footstools, which they only require to be separated and polished off a little to be fit for use. A complete set of furniture for a doll of the most aristocratic family is offered for twenty-five cents and less.

Then there are the emery wheels, from which a stream of fire flows, as the tools to be ground on them come in contact with the surface. Near them is the borer that can, as the inventor says, "bore a hole through the side of a inch rum in three minutes." Next we have a saw that can be set to saw all sorts of shapes, and behind all, the printing presses, the pumps and the great engines, with whirring wheels and tremendous beams, that seem as if bound to keep moving for ever and ever. Returning down the north corridor we come upon a most astonishing and startling display of medicines, a room full of novel design and construction, and an apparatus showing practically how farina and similar articles of diet are prepared. Then we find those very useful articles—stoves and heaters. There is quite a display of them, little stoves and big ones, stoves showing some beauty of design and nicely of construction, and stoves which look as if the designer had forgotten, or been ignorant of, the first principles of his art. There is nothing very new here. Every year a stove of new design comes out, but there are few which do not violate some of the well-known laws of calorification. There is one stove, however, on exhibition, which is simple in design and in construction, and is said to consume its own smoke. Near by is the furniture, some of it constructed

"A double debt to pay,
A bed by night, a chest of drawers by day."

Then there are novelties in the way of mattresses and bed-bottoms, and stools and tables and mirrors, the last admitting of the person using them seeing himself before and behind at the same time. Here, too, is a man making candy, who has somehow or other got mixed up with the stoves and furniture. A large number of small faces are generally to be found round this man, who is evidently looked upon by the small people as a being of a superior order, who has nothing to do but amuse himself all day long with making candies and eating them. If he likes. Times fairies dispense the candies to the man who makes the candy. Next we stumble on an invalid's chair, in which a stout man wheels himself about, assuming a languishing look and attitude, to show, it may be supposed, how an invalid should compose himself. This exhausts the north corridor, and passing the soda-water stands, cool and bright and tempting as they seem, we pass on to the south corridor. Here is a shooting-gallery and several curiosities in the way of ancient Indian moccasins, hunting-shirts and a pair of very old skates, very long, with very low irons, and very rusty. The corridor appears to be devoted to the display of articles for domestic use, sewing-machines, hemmers, button-hole makers, &c. Stopping for a moment to look at the two men making pocket-books and porte-monnaies, we are stopped by a man who has devoted his life to constructing a new mop. This man evidently has faith in his mop. He explains all its peculiarities with such energy of language and gesture that we believe there must be something in his invention worthy of notice. He twists and turns his mop, flirts it, and mops up imaginary puddles with it, and descants on its hidden merits so learnedly and complacently that we feel sure he believes like Mrs. Partington, that he could mop up the whole Atlantic Ocean with it, should he ever be called on to do so. Leaving him still mopping, we pass on amid churns, and buckets, and potato-washers, and carpet-sweepers, and carpet-beaters, till we come on some of the "secrets of the sullen mine." Here are all sorts of ores from Washoe, and Nevada, and California, and Lake Superior, and a hundred other places of interest, as showing the great wealth of this country, yet to be developed. Returning through the centre of the hall, we find some fine displays of fruit and domestic wines, some glass-blowers hard at work, producing with a twist of their rods all sorts of fairy-like scrolls of bright glass, horses and carriages, small men and women, tumblers, "tantalus glasses," from which the thirsty lips in vain seek to absorb the liquid within, and a thousand other tricks. Alert is a steam-engine, constructed entirely of glass, and in full operation, with steam passing from boiler to piston, and all its parts working as smoothly as if constructed of metal. A curious trunk-lock is also worthy of notice, considering how often keys are lost and mislaid.

Leaving the floor and passing upstairs, we come to the "Fine Art Department." This has never been a particularly attractive portion of the annual exhibition, and it will not do in the present instance. The department contains little beyond photographs and chromo-lithographs. At the extreme end of the gallery, however, a new invention, or art, is exhibited—that of decorating mirrors with engraved figures. The effect is novel and pleasing, and the art is evidently destined to come into vogue. Near by is Miss VIOLET BEAR's studio, as it may be called, as the fair artist is herself present during certain portions of the day and evening, at work upon a bust of PETER COOPER. Her busts of LINCOLN and one or two groups of statuary are also to be seen here.

Taken altogether, the present exhibition, though presenting noth

THE PAY ROLLS.

A Further List of Employes Under the City and County Government.

We give today a further list of employes under the City and County Governments. In the case of the many Departments the sums each enormous amounts from the City Treasury, but this journal failed to discover the most glaring frauds. In the Board of Public Works and in the City Courts the list of officers is absolutely astounding, and the local manner with which thousands of dollars have been bestowed upon the retainers of the Ring is almost past belief. A man named RICHARD BURRS, who is down upon Mr. EWBANK's pay-roll as an Assistant Clerk to the Commissioners among a couple of hundred others, for $100 per Month, called on the office of the Times yesterday, and emphatically avowed that he had never received a single dollar from the Department of Public Works. He further said that he called at the office on Broadway, and was told by Mr. CLIFFORD that his name was substituted for one DENNIS LEARY, and it appears that Mr. DENNIS LEARY, whose name is cast upon the pay-roll, never turns his face towards the City in his employment, and an additional hundred for which he gives Mr. BURRS name. There are many such instances which could be cited, and should the whole list of chosen clerks to Commissioners, County officers, building inspectors, &c., be closely examined, very few of them will be found that are not absolutely unknown. Below is given a sample of the pay-rolls of the laborers.

The following is the pay-roll of mechanics and laborers in the Bureau of Streets, under the Department of Public Works of the City of New-York, for four weeks, ending July 31, 1871.

We the undersigned, acknowledge to have received from John T. Brady, Comptroller, the amounts set opposite our respective names, in full payment for our services in the employ of the Department of Public Works, for the period specified, and for the work and labor performed by us in the Bureau of Streets, under the Commissioners of Public Works, for the City of New-York.

In the Fire Department and the Department of Education it is believed that there are no sinecures. It has cost the City an average of $180,000 to pay all the salaries in the Board of Education. At the headquarters of the Fire Department—where alone it is possible for the executive to assist—the representatives of the TIMES was informed by every man on the roll while at his desk. In the Police Department it is said that there are one or two places tantamount to sinecures. It costs the City $630,000 a month to sustain the Department.

The Lexington-Avenue "Rake-Off."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of Sept. 13 you speak of "the Park-place swindle and the iniquities of the work sanctioned by the Commissioners, WALTER ROCKE, JOHN SCOTT and JAMES H. COLEMAN." At the time of the vexatious of the "Ring" found, "one of your correspondents, "LEX," inquired, "Who is Mr. JAMES H. COLEMAN and who appointed him receiver?" &c. The query of "LEX" has never been announced in your columns. With your permission I will give you the result of a little experience of one of my clients, who owned a house on the line of the Lexington-avenue extension from Sixty-sixth street to Ninety-seventh street, and know how nicely the Ring have filled their own pockets and robbed their confiding friends.

The bill to open and extend the avenue passed the Legislature April 21, 1868, but, owing to various causes, not necessary to allude to at present, the Commissioners were not appointed until 1870. "ALECK" FERRAR, otherwise known as "Poultice" FERRAR, from his connection with the infamous swindle, the Fifth-avenue "poultice pavement," as a trusty henchman of SWEENY, manipulated the thing so that he received the appointment of "Commissioner of Estimate and Assessment." GEORGE B. VAN BRUNT was named Chairman, and H. SMITH was added to the list to give an air of respectability to the intended robbery. VAN BRUNT is called "Colonel" by the admirers, from the fact that he had some connection with the Quartermaster's Department at the time of the Hilton Head expedition. H. SMITH is, I believe, one of the proprietors of the Madison-avenue line of stages. The Commissioners met in the form at that hot-bed of political and City rascality, No. 52 Nassau-street, Room No. 32, and arranged their plans. They selected for the first set of appraisers men utterly ignorant of the value of real estate—mere political machines, who, acting under instructions from their masters, put the value of stone houses far below the cost of building the most common frame ones. My client owned a small stone house, up among the "seventies," and worth about $18,000. These "dummy appraisers" placed its value at $4,000, and every other house, whether stone, brick or wood, on the line of the proposed avenue, Sixty-sixth to Ninety-seventh streets, was purposely depreciated. There were a great many frame houses on the line of the avenue, owned by small mechanics, widows, or held in trust for minors. The owners looked forward to the robbery of their property, and felt utterly helpless. It was intimated in a quiet way that a certain lawyer, a "go-between," might be found who, perhaps, might influence these kind-hearted Commissioners and induce them to reconsider their estimate and assessment. When one remembers that nearly all of these small property-holders are Democrats, the robbery of their homesteads seems all the more cruel. The Chairman, VAN BRUNT, was asked by one of his neighbors what he should do about it, and the honorable "Colonel" brusquely said, "Go to JERMY COLEMAN and ask him to do it for you." He went and had it "fixed"—how do you suppose? A fifth was handed to him, by which JOHN BRIDGMAN "agreed to pay to the said COLEMAN twenty-five per cent for any award over and above the original award." If the Commissioners said "No" to the piteous appeals of the aged and disagreeable "go-between"—why, he would ask nothing for his services! Could anything be fairer, more honorable, more just?

Mr. COLEMAN has an office very convenient to No. 52, Room No. 32, and so the property-holders gratefully wended their way to the office of this lay brother of the Order of Jesus, and one after another fell into the net so nicely arranged for them, while the Commissioners, just across the narrow street of Nassau, quietly chuckled over the success of their little plan, guzzled Eugene Roederer or Veuve Clicquot, and counted up their prospective profits. Of course the men who in the expressive argot of the day are called, respectively, "Boss" TWEED, "Boston" SWEENY, "Slippery DICK" and "Auctioneer" A. O. HALL, had to be propitiated, but still, after all this discounting of their claims, there would still be a nice plum left for each one of the honorable Commissioners, who lived on the fat of the land and enjoyed their $5 each for one hour's work per day, while the little game was going on. The scheme progressed, and although some men and women held back, feeling that if they touched the pitch they would be defiled—in other words, if they assented to the demands of the unusual attorney they loaned themselves to a fraud, or a fraudulent arrangement, yet human nature is weak; people said they could not rest supine and let the Ring rob them, and so finally, on the 12th of April, 1870, when "the roll of the costs, charges and expenses incurred by reasons of the proceedings in the above entitled matter, viz., the opening of Lexington-avenue from Sixty-sixth to Ninety-seventh street, in the City of New-York," was presented to Hon. ALBERT CARDOZO in that curious manner which swallows up so many carpets, furniture, plaster, safes and thermometers, in the new Court-house, the thing was all settled, and VAN BRUNT, FERRAR, SMITH, COLEMAN & Co. had the property-owners of a mile and a half of houses and lots on one of the most fashionable avenues of New-York completely under their thumbs. The new appraisers decided, and in some cases brished, the original awards under the stipulations of the twenty-five per cent: commissions agreed upon. My client, ROBINSON, paid the "go-between" about fifteen hundred dollars, and for various other contingencies about five hundred dollars. He has returned to his old home in New-England, a sadder but a wiser man, and tells his neighbors New-York is a hotbed of villainy.

About a year ago the houses and parts of houses, lots and parts of lots, on the proposed line of the avenue were sold by order of the Department of Public Works in the Vestibule of the City Hall by B. P. FAIRCHILD, TWEED's uptown real estate man. Why FAIRCHILD does not belong to that immaculate band of thirty-eight who proposed to erect a statue to the great "Boss" on the Tweed Plaza, I cannot imagine, for he does a great deal of the heavy uptown purchasing for him; in fact, far more than Police-Justice SCOTT, who subscribed for the statue, or CAMERON HEAD, who went into the Rebellion and opening the bidding of his master. All great men must have what the old Romans called their umbras. "Poultice" FERRAR, the Chairman of the Committee of Cities, in last Winter's Legislature, acted as the special umbra of SWEENY. FAIRCHILD plays the part for TWEED, and he, too, with the "greatness thrust upon him," has his umbra, or in plain English, his fool, in the shape of a keen-eyed, squabby little fellow, who acts as his auctioneer. If one should visit the little auction-shop of FAIRCHILD, in Beach-street, he would hardly look for so much Machiavellian ability and finesse, but the chief diminutive shop is crowded before the city's sales of lots and parts of lots, &c., a curious crowd might have been seen, thoroughly-dressed mechanics, dapper sprigs of world-be gentility, pale-faced widows, with little children, and they all went there for one purpose, to try and make some arrangement through which they might secure their homes after they had been knocked down by the glib auctioneer. It may not be known to the public generally that when the city sells houses, or parts of houses, on the line of proposed streets or avenues, they are knocked down for a mere song, brown stone fronts bringing only $400 to $600; but they have to be removed within a specified time. It was stated by the attorney that the property would not be sold according to the Ward numbers, block numbers, or even street numbers, but according to a certain schedule, known only to FAIRCHILD's man. Of course the "go-between" would "fix" that, but the "fixing" required an interview with the man who wielded the City hammer, and unless the "fixing" was satisfactory to him it was intimated that you might attend the sale and yet not know when your own house was sold. The entire sale spoke of property was rattled off in forty-eight minutes, and houses were knocked down to the highest bidder for $1,600, and resold at a profit of $400 per cent if you "fixed" the thing before the sale, the depletion of your purse is not at all an serious. Say your house brought $300 to $100; you paid the auctioneer $200, and the bill of sale was issued to you on elaborately-watered paper, popularly known as the "Ring paper." On calling at the Comptroller's office to receive the amount of the award, the plain question was asked, "Did you employ Mr. COLEMAN to have the award raised? If so, we must deduct from the amount due twenty-five per cent. for his services as attorney!"

You know how the entire City is honeycombed with similar jobs. The Lexington-avenue robbery has only just come to light. On the 9th of April, 1871, "ALECK" FERRAR, as Chairman of the Assembly Committee on Cities, "reported complete the bill to extend the avenue to Harlem," two years above the present extension, and unless the Committee of Seventy stop this swindle, the "go-between" and his friends will go to work again on their twenty-five per cent, and have another hard at the purse-strings of poor mechanics, widows and orphans.

You have exposed the following swindles: The Viaduct scheme, the Park-place job, the Church-street widening, Broadway widening, Mutual Gas-works, Harbor Masters' fraud, Water-meters, Harlem Court-house, New-York Printing Company, and others. Will you not tell the story of the Lexington-avenue "rake" to your list?

While the City debt increases $6,427,753 43 per month, according to the Mayor's own figures, while the whole City and County debt is over $100,000,000, according to the researches of the Committee of Seventy, they thieves and speculators of TWEED & Co. buy whole blocks of the most valuable property in the City.

In the Real Estate Record of Saturday, Sept. 16, the entry is seen of:

"One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Seventh streets, Third and Fourth avenues, one block. One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Seventh streets, First and Madison avenues, one block. One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Seventh streets, Madison and Fifth avenues, one block. SAMUEL LORD, of England, to WM. LAIDLAW, JAMES H. COLEMAN and THOMAS J. CREAMER. Sept. 4. $240,000."

The Novelty Works have been sold, according to the statement in your own paper, to E. F. FARGO for half a million of dollars.

Where does all this money come from? Perhaps the Committee of Seventy may deem it expedient to send for persons and papers, and prove this Lexington-avenue swindle.

When they have time, it would be well to look at MURRAY HOFFMAN on street-openings, page 1, section 36, and see whether the Commissioners have not violated the act of April 13, 1869.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 22, 1871. PHOEBUS.

SALT LAKE.

Adjournment of the Grand Jury—Judge McKean's Address.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 6.—Judge McKEAN has just adjourned the Grand Jury till Nov. 13, next. In doing so, his Honor made the following remarks:

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY: You have presented to the Court some very important indictments, some of which are yet insufficiently known to the public. You are all business men, and most of you are largely engaged in business enterprises. You have rightly comprehended your duties. The man is an idiot who does not know that business interests and human interests largely depend upon the enforcement of the laws, and the man is a knave who knows this and yet opposes the enforcement of the laws. The time is near at hand when even idiots will perceive and knaves confess that you, gentlemen, are among the best promoters of the highest interests of this Territory and of society. Your names and what you have done will be mentioned with gratitude by the good and wise years to come. You ask permission to adjourn for a time; you shall have it. The Court must remain in session for some weeks yet, but you may adjourn to Monday, the 13th day of November next. Come back at that time, gentlemen, and there will be more work for you to do. You have the thanks of the Court for what you have done.

SONS OF AMERICA.

The State Encampment at Albany—Election of Officers.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The State Camp of Sons of America held its annual meeting here yesterday. Some seventy delegates were present, representing camps mainly from the eastern part of the State. The old Board of officers retired, and the following were elected for the ensuing year:

President, GEORGE B. VAN CLEEF, of New-York; Vice President, M. L. FILKINS, of Albany; Master of Forms and Ceremonies, H. W. WILKINSON, of Williamsburg; Secretary, Rev. SAMUEL MCKEON, of Albany. A new constitution was adopted, and other proceedings of no public interest transacted.

In the evening a mass-meeting of the Order was held, at which addresses were delivered by Rev. Samuel McKeon, Hon. Daniel Ullmann, B. Landman, of Buffalo, Messrs. Albertson, Leonard, Pitt and others.

The next meeting will be held in New-York City in March next.

The United States Circuit in North Carolina.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Information has been received from Raleigh, N. C., to the following effect:

During the term of the United States Circuit Court, forty-six judgments have been pronounced, of fine or imprisonment, or both. On the docket for the June term were nineteen cases for Ku-Klux-ing. During the adjourned term, just closed, sixty-one more bills were found by the Grand Jury, and of the entire eighty cases only three have been disposed of yet. The United States ex R. A. SHOEMAKER and others, in the Philippi case, and the cases of the United States ex Amos Owens and others for the Biggerstaff raids, leaving seventy-seven cases on the docket, one of which is the case of HENRY CHANCE (colored) and four others. The cases on the docket embrace several hundred defendants.

The Welland Canal—A Movement for Reform.

ST. CATHERINES, Canada, Oct. 6.—A very large meeting was held here last evening, attended by the Members of Parliament representing this section of country, the principal mill and shipowners, merchants and others, to consider the present defective state of the Welland Canal. Resolutions were passed that improvements were required for the development of the trade of the Great West; that the subject is of the highest importance to the Dominion, and should be prosecuted at the earliest possible moment; that the trade of the West and that of the Dominion demand imperatively for the immediate enlargement of the canal, with an abundant supply of water from Lake Erie for navigation and manufacturing purposes. It was finally resolved that the foregoing resolutions be embodied in a petition to the Legislature, and forwarded to members of Parliament of the district for presentation. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one, and the past management and present condition of the Welland Canal was loudly denounced.

The American Board of Foreign Missions.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 6.—The American Board of Foreign Missions held a closing meeting today in Mechanic Hall, which was thronged. President HOPKINS introduced the missionaries present, who are about to leave for the field of their labors, in touching remarks, to which several of them responded. Those who return to missionary work are Rev. H. S. HERRMAN and wife of the Harpoot mission, Rev. LUTHER H. GULICK and wife of the Japanese mission, Rev. CHAUNCEY GOODRICH and wife of the Peking China Mission, Rev. H. A. SCHAUFFLER and wife of the Constantinople Mission, and Rev. JOHN T. GULICK of the North China Mission. The new laborers are as follows: Mr. Anna V. Mumford, to Bulgaria, Turkey; Rev. W. J. Spencing and wife, to Western Turkey; Rev. J. L. Davis and wife, to Japan; Rev. J. Berry Hodge, to Bulgaria; Rev. W. Parsons, to the same Mission; Rev. W. Berry, M. D., to Japan; Thomas L. Riggs, to the Dakota Indians; Rev. J. K. Scott and wife, to Eastern Turkey. The farewell services were of an exceedingly interesting and impressive character.

A Sensation Spoiled—The Gang Still Tenacious—Story Contradicted.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs today received, through Superintendent HOAG, a letter written by Agent TATUM pronouncing the harrowing story telegraphed from St. Louis, of the recent capture of a train near Fort Sill, and the torture and murder of its teamsters, utterly without foundation. No such outrages have been committed in that vicinity this year.

The Jones' Wood Homicide.

Coroner HERRMAN yesterday concluded the inquest in the case of CHARLES BAUMAN, the boy who was shot at the gallery at Jones' Wood. The jury rendered a verdict that deceased was shot by some person unknown. The jury added: "We censure the proprietors of the target gallery at Jones' Wood for not using the necessary precautions to render the shooting gallery safe for such purposes, and we recommend the authorities to prohibit shooting in the gallery until it is rendered perfectly safe."

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—IN ADMIRALTY.

IMPORTANT DECISION BY JUDGE BENEDICT—A CASE INVOLVING THE RIGHTS OF CARRIERS AND SHIPPERS.

The following opinion and decision by Judge BENEDICT were filed in the United States District Court, in Admiralty, of the Eastern District, yesterday:

Henry Heath et al. vs. The Steam-ship Idaho, &c.—This is a proceeding in rem, to recover of the steam-ship Idaho for the non-delivery of certain cotton, valued at $25,000, which was shipped in the port of New-York on the 3d day of May, 1869, to be transported from New-York to Liverpool. The original shipment consisted of 209 bales, claimed to have been then owned by Thomas W. Man, who, on the day of the shipment, and before any bill of lading was issued, sold the same to the libelants from on board. The bill of lading contained the ordinary contract to deliver the cotton at Liverpool, to the order of Man as the shipper. It was signed on the 4th of May and Man then indorsed on it a direction to deliver the goods to James Friday & Co., who were agents of the libelants in Liverpool. The steamer duly performed her voyage and delivered her cargo, but of this shipment of cotton only thirty-five bales were delivered to James Friday & Co., the remaining 168 bales were delivered to Baring Brothers, acting as agents for W. J. Porter & Co. For this failure to perform the contract in the bill of lading the libelants bring this action. It is necessary here to state but one of the defenses set up by the ship, which is that neither the man who received the bill of lading, nor the libelants to whom it was transferred, were entitled to the cotton, but that it belonged to Porter & Co., and that the delivery to the then owner on his demand, constitutes a defense to this action. The facts material to this action are as follows: In April, 1869, W. J. Porter & Co., in due course of business, and in good faith, advanced a large sum of money upon a bill of lading which set forth a shipment of 140 bales of cotton at New-Orleans in the brig O. C. Colen. The bill of lading was in the ordinary form, executed by the lawful master of the Colen, but in fact no such cotton had been shipped at the time of its execution, some few days after the date of the bill of lading, and after the acceptance of the drafts by Porter & Co. Forbes did, however, ship by the Colen 140 bales of cotton as, and for, the cotton described in the bill of lading which he had sent to Porter & Co. This cotton was duly delivered to the Colen, was receipted for by the officers of the brig, and, although not placed then on board, was delivered to the vessel on the wharf alongside, and in my opinion duly shipped as cotton to be transported and delivered according to the bill of lading which the master had already signed. By this shipment, the title to the 140 bales so shipped passed to Porter & Co., who had advanced upon the faith of such shipment, and held the bill of lading which set forth the shipment in question. (12 Pick 514, Halsey vs. Hamilton, U. S. Supreme Court, December Term, 1870.) Subsequent to this shipment, and on the same day before the cotton was taken into the hold of the vessel, Forbes accomplished its removal from the custody of the brig, and its shipment in the steam-ship Ludoria, lying near by, bound for New-York. The previous shipment of the cotton in the Colen was unknown to the officers of the Ludoria, and they, of course, issued bills of lading in the ordinary form for the cotton they received. Forbes, it seems, shipped also in the Ludoria twenty-five other bales, and took one bill of lading for the 165, on which second bill of lading he obtained a large advance from the firm of Schaffer & Co. of New-York, to whom he made a second consignment of cotton. An issue has been raised as to the identity of the cotton shipped on the Colen with that shipped on the Ludoria, but the weight of the evidence is that the same 140 bales delivered to Porter went to the Ludoria and were included in the bill of lading for 165 which was sent to Schaffer & Co. Were the direct evidence upon this point less conclusive than it is, I should still be of the same opinion because of the dealing of Schaffer & Co. with the cotton after it was delivered to them from the Ludoria in New-York. It appears that the Ludoria arrived in New-York on the 30th or 31st of April. The 165 bales were taken directly to a warehouse by Schaffer & Co., who on the 1st of May engaged freight on the Idaho for 200 bales cotton; on the same day Schaffer & Co. sent for one Corcoran, who went to Schaffer's house on Sunday and was there directed, as he says, to "remove all the marks" from the 165 bales and to remark them with marks similar to thirty-five other bales which Schaffer & Co. had stored in West-street. Corcoran did this as well as the short time permitted, and on Monday, May 2, the whole 200 bales marked were shipped on board the Idaho. This shipment was made in Schaffer's name, but while Corcoran was at work on the cotton it was nominally sold in Man, a clerk of Schaffer's, and was shipped, in the name of Conklin & Davis, brokers, who produced their marks to be those used, and indorsed the ship receipts over to man. On the 5th of May Man applied for and received the bill of lading of the Idaho for the 200 bales, on which this action is brought. Mr. Schaffer testifies that on the 3d of May a bill of sale of the cotton had been given to Man, which, however, is not produced; and it is clear in the evidence that any transfer to Man was merely nominal for the purpose of obscuring the title of the cotton. On the same day Man sold the cotton to Hents & Co. from on board, but this was also merely nominal. Hents & Co. were told to ask no questions, and to the 5th or 6th day of May, 1869, they paid to Man, who paid it to Schaffer, who held it till maturity, and when Hents & Co. paid the amount of it to Man they obtained Schaffer's guarantee against loss. Man then paid the proceeds over to Schaffer, who gave him a check for $20,000, and credited in price Schaffer the sale to Man and Man's sale to Hents & Co. The statement of these facts, with the additional one that Man, although alive and in New-York, is not called as a witness, are sufficient to show the nature of the transaction. Under such a state of facts the presumption arises that the libelants on the cotton which arrived in the Idaho would have proved its identity with that shipped on the Colen, otherwise, why obliterate the marks of carefully retaining them? Everything is to be presumed against the despoiler of evidence. I find, therefore, as a question of fact, that the 140 bales of cotton shipped on the Colen, and transferred by bill of lading to Porter & Co., formed part of the 165 bales received by Schaffer & Co. from the Ludoria, and of the 200 bales shipped in the Idaho under the bill of lading, in which this action is brought. And I find further, that the present libelants are in law chargeable with notice that they were dealing in stolen property, of which the title was in dispute. Indeed, the facts of the case and the manner of the witnesses satisfy me that Schaffer & Co. are the real parties in interest here. It is, at any rate, quite certain that the libelants' title to the 140 bales is no better than Schaffer's; and Schaffer has no title as against Porter & Co., to whom the cotton had been shipped by the first bill of lading issued by the master of the Colen. I am thus brought to consider the question of law which has been so earnestly discussed before me, and to determine whether the delivery of this cotton to Porter & Co., the real owners, is a good defense to a suit by Porter & Co., to recover back the cotton. In several cases the Courts of common law have held that a delivery by the carrier to the actual owner was a good defense to the action of a shipper where possession was acquired by fraud. I am unable to discover any real ground of distinction in principle between the cases of fraud referred to and the greatest case of fraud has been an important fact in these cases, namely, when proved, it showed the shipper to be without title to the property; but the same result should follow if it be known in any way that the shipper has no title. The defense has been sustained by the Courts in such cases, not for the purpose of punishing fraud, but because by reason of the fraud the shipper acquired no right to the property. Under all the facts, the libelants must fail to recover for any portion of the cotton by Porter & Co., in Liverpool, and a decree must enter dismissing the libel with costs.

Eliphalet B. Poinsett and Judge Shalett for the libelants; Owen, Hall & Gray and William G. Choate for claimants.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Judge Blatchford.

EXECUTION IN THE PATENT WATCH CASE.

Yesterday Judge BLATCHFORD rendered his decision as follows in the patent watch case of Eugene Paulus vs. Edouard Bingum et al. This case is not so far from doubt on the question involved as the invention covered by the two claims of the plaintiff's patent as to make it proper to grant a provisional injunction; it must therefore go to a final hearing.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART II—OCT. 6.

Before Judge Freedman and a Jury.

ADULTERATION NOT NECESSARILY A DEFRECIATION OF VALUE—DEFECTIVE PROOF.

R. V. Walbell vs. W. H. Allen.—This is an action to recover $2,000 damages, alleged to have been caused by defendant adulterating with marble dust some 800,000 pounds of pumice-stone sent by plaintiff to defendant's mill to be ground. Plaintiff claimed that the admixture of marble rendered the pumice-stone valueless for polishing purposes. Defendant denied that the injury, if any, was caused by adulteration, but claimed, on the contrary, that the inferiority was the result of injury by fire sustained by the stone before it came to him.

The testimony having been closed, Judge FREEDMAN said the testimony of plaintiff was extremely vague as to the amount of damage sustained. It had not even been shown that the marble dust, if mixed with the pumice-stone, was less valuable. On these grounds he directed a nonsuit for the defendant.

Miers & Bagby for plaintiff; Sherwood & Howland for defendant.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—PART I—Oct. 6.

Before Judge Van Brunt and a Jury.

DAMAGES FOR A GAS EXPLOSION.

David M. Davis vs. The Manhattan Gas Company.—This is an action to recover $10,000 damages for injuries to person and property, alleged to have been caused by an explosion of gas, the result of negligence on the part of the defendants' workmen. It appeared that in September, 1868, at the request of plaintiff, defendants put in a new service-pipe, leading from the street to plaintiff's cellar. The work having been completed, and inspected by defendants' man, the latter told some person in plaintiff's store to light up and see how it worked. No sooner was the match applied than an explosion occurred, resulting in the injury of several persons, and of a large amount, the property of the plaintiff. The defence was, that the explosion was owing to no fault of defendants or their workmen, as the service-pipe had just been inspected and found perfect; moreover, that the explosion took place in the store above, and not in the cellar or basement into which the service-pipe led.

Case still on.

Henry L. Clinton for plaintiff; H. H. Anderson for defendants.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Mayor's Grand Jury.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of this day you comment upon the antecedents of some of the jurors, and state that "Mr. JOHN A. HARDENBURG, of No. 12 East Twelfth-street, was reported to be the brother-in-law of Hon. 'Sunset' Cox, the Tammany Congressman, and to be a resident of the latter's house."

I have known Mr. JOHN A. HARDENBURG twenty-five years intimately. He is a son of the late Rev. Dr. HARDENBURG, whose life was spent in the ministry, and who has gone to receive his reward. He is a retired merchant, and was formerly Vice-President of the Home Mutual Life Insurance Company—a man of pure life, honorable in all things, of strict probity and unsullied reputation, and one in whose integrity I have unbounded confidence. It is true that he married the mater of the wife of the so-called "Sunset" Cox, but it is untrue that he lives in the house of Mr. COX. Mr. HARDENBURG resides in his own house, is a man possessed of ample means, and is incapable of performing any servile act. In any capacity I know that Mr. HARDENBURG will discharge his whole duty without favor or affection and fearless of consequences.

NEW-YORK, Friday, Oct. 6, 1871.

An Explanation.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your statement regarding me in Thursday's issue is quite incorrect. I have studied shorthand and written it. My position has been that of law reporter of the Court, and if you see proper to send one of your reporters to my office I will convince him that the duties performed were adequate to all compensation received. I am not in any sense a reference lawyer, as you would infer, not having received over five references during the past year, and those by consent of all the parties. As to the other assertion, I appear in Court quite as often as my duties are required.

If you will make further inquiry of the Judges of the Supreme Court they will give you such information as will convince you that my position is by no means a sinecure one. I make this communication to you desiring to disabuse your mind of what, I feel, upon investigation, will prove to be an honest mistake on your part.

Respectfully, WESLEY S. YARD.

A Poor Man's Mite.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Please find enclosed $1 for the Committee of Seventy. The sum is very small, but it represents a large part of my worldly possessions. Some may laugh at me, saying, "What interest can this beggar have in the frauds?" I will answer, I expect some day to own property, and I do not care to have some foreign banker hold a mortgage on it, after I have paid one hundred cents on the dollar for it.

A POOR YOUNG MAN.

[The dollar has been sent to the Committee.]

More Questions for the School Commissioners.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Allow me to tender to you my thanks for publishing my inquiry regarding the salaries of the Commissioners in the present Department of Public Instruction. But, Mr. Editor, am I not to be answered? Or, does their continued silence tacitly imply consent? Do you think, if they are addressed personally, they will answer? Do you think, Mr. Editor, that they will tell what has become of the utterly impracticable plan for the building to be erected for the "Normal College," for which they paid $1,000, and what was the name of the lucky architect who received it? Do you think it was economical, Mr. Editor, to give for a worthless drawing a sum equal to the salary of some of our teachers for two years and a half?

Do you thing, Mr. Editor, that they will tell why they refuse to raise our salaries, under the pretext of economy, and at the same time appropriate $1,000 for piano recitals to be given at the "Female Normal College," by a celebrity? Is this economy?

Will they tell us why they superseded the former Principal of the Saturday Normal School, a man of incorruptible morals, unerring judgment and spotless reputation, and placed in his stead one vastly his inferior? Can they explain? Will they tell why they treated for the personal friend of the present incumbent for a position unheard of before, but drawing the pay of $4,000 per annum? A salary, then in advance of many of the established tutors in the "City College" for Boys. Will they tell us, the teachers, why the tutors in the Normal College, with only one or two honorable exceptions, were selected from fourth, fifth and sixth grade teachers, instead of the teachers of our former "Supplementary Classes?"

Do you think, Mr. Editor, that they can or will explain why their meetings, although open to the public, are conducted on the "Star Chamber" process of referring everything to committees, and thus avoid open discussion on subjects of so much interest?

Are we never to be represented (as we are not now) by Commissioners who are citizens of our own Wards, and thus perfectly conversant with and anxious to provide for the wants of schools and teachers in a more particular and consequently less general, or rather wholesale manner?

Will they inform us why they are at present interfering with the internal management of our schools, thus reflecting on the executive ability of our Normal College principals?

Why are we content to keep useless statistics in books printed (at enormous cost, and for the sole purpose of filling the pockets of some lucky bookseller?

Are these things true? or am I misinformed? Will not some one prove, even if I am only

AN AMERICAN PROTESTANT TEACHER.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Oct. 2, 1871.

Cassidy of a Western.

Of an aged individual known as Uncle TOMMY WASGRAUN, the Knoxville Chronicle speaks thus:

"Uncle TOMMY was born in Lexington, Va., May 14, 1775—three years before the declaration of American independence, and in consequently new ninety-eight years old. His mother had sixteen children. When twenty years old he removed to Finley Gap, Jefferson County, Tenn. He has never been married, and is consequently an old bachelor. He has been an eye-witness to the growth of East Tennessee from a wilderness to its present degree of prosperity. He knew Knoxville when it was more dog than people in the place. One being owned by Capt. MORGAN and the other by old BILLY PARK. He has been in four wars. At one time of life he weighed 185 pounds, but his weight at present is only sixty-one pounds. He has chewed tobacco nearly eight years, and don't think it will kill him for some time yet. He has eat no meat for sixty-one years. He only eats now is a piece of light bread and a cup of coffee, and he does not perspire in the hottest weather. Second hearing his returned, but his eye-sight is still dim. Uncle TOMMY is a great traveler, and although so very aged, is continually moving. Knoxville is his place of abode on the lines of railroad. His range is between Lynchburg, Va., and Augusta, Ga. He is passed everywhere free, and pays as at the hotels on the same terms. His first vote (at President) was cast for JAMES MONROE for his first term. He never could endure JACKSON, and voted for HENRY CLAY when that great Whig was a candidate for the Presidency. Uncle TOMMY was a most enthusiastic Whig in those days, and lands HENRY CLAY to the skies. He cast his last Presidential vote for GRANT, and says he will vote for him again, and that 'GRANT will be elected mighty easy.' Uncle TOMMY belongs to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and has made due preparation for that event which he has been awaiting so long—death."

The Suit Against the Pennsylvania State Bonds.

Auditor-General HARTRANFT and State Treasurer MACKEY, of Pennsylvania, have addressed a letter to Gov. GRARY, in which, after reciting the fact that Judge MCCUNN, of this City is holding the case of Mr. EVANS, and proposes to enter into its merits, they quote the provisions of the laws and the Constitution relating to requisitions by one Governor upon another, and say:

"We regard this interference of a State Judge as totally unwarranted and an insult to our Commonwealth, and as an obstruction of the course of public justice. We therefore respectfully request you, as the Chief Executive of this Commonwealth, to advise Gov. HOFFMAN of this obstruction and interference with the execution of his warrant of removal, and to make demand of him that he cause the said GEORGE O. EVANS to be delivered to the agents of this Commonwealth in accordance with the provisions of the above recited act of Congress."

A New Ocean Steamer.

A new iron steamer is being constructed for the Virginia Steam-ship line running between this port, Norfolk and Richmond. She will be about 1,300 tons burden. Her length is 210 feet; breadth of beam, 33 feet, and depth of hold, 20 feet. She is to be a screw-propeller, and will be fitted with engines of the most approved pattern, and the state-rooms with all the latest improvements.

The Grand Duke.

The New-York Times,
DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—encouraging, unremitting warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local governments. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing influence of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democracy has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with unflinching energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. The department of the paper will be uniformly full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly edition; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

Tammany and the Democracy.

"Let the people judge us," said Mr. TILDEN, in his speech at Rochester, "by what we do to cleanse our party, and to purify the official trusts of the country, and to elevate the standard of public morality." By all means let the people judge the Democracy by that standard. It is both a just and a practical one. Applying it to the proceedings of the Democratic Convention, what is the result? That body, representing the entire party of the State, by a vote of every member but four, refused to do the one thing imperatively necessary to "cleanse the party." It admitted the Tammany delegates to their full rights in the Convention, and allowed them to waive the exercise of those rights on their simple promise to discover and punish the parties guilty of the crimes which they and their masters had committed. This was acknowledging their fellowship with the party, and retaining them, with all their outrageous sins upon them, in the intimate relations they have so long maintained, so corruptly used, and now so insolently assert. Is it "cleansing the party" to take thieves by the hand, listen to their soft words, and accept with acclamation their hypocritical and impudent professions of virtuous intention? Is it "cleansing the party" to embrace Mr. TWEED's dummies, with their vile record of plunder, and fraud, and forgery, and to be content with frothy denunciation of crimes, while forming a close alliance, defensive and offensive, with the criminals? Is it "cleansing the party" to openly admit that the party cannot afford to be cleansed, and does not want to be cleansed, and does not give up the help of Tammany's corruption fund and election frauds, or trust to the people to recognize and reward an honest and effectual repudiation of the Tammany thieves? Never did an attempt to do a decent thing fail more shamefully than Mr. TILDEN's effort to drive the Tammany leaders from their party on account of their confessed infamy. And it failed for the simple reason that there was in the Democratic Party in the State a much deeper sympathy with those leaders than with the honest Democrats who are fighting them. Of this fact "let the people judge."

Let them judge the Democratic Party also by what it has done to "purify official trusts." Official trusts never were so basely and wickedly betrayed as by the Tammany office-holders. They were, in fact, created to be betrayed by the very men who betrayed them. TWEED, and CREAMER, and BRADLEY in the Senate, FIELDS, and HITCHMAN, and FERRAR, and their colleagues in the Assembly of the State, deliberately planned and executed the fraudulent charter under which their tool, HALL, appointed them to office, with the intent of using the offices thus obtained for plunder, corruption, and violation of the elective franchise. These are notorious facts. What has the Democratic Party done about them? It has received the guilty plotters in unquestioned political fraternity, it permits them to continue in authoritative control of the party in this City, and it contracts to partake with them in whatever advantage they can command from past plunder or future frauds upon the ballot-box. When the people come to judge what the Democratic Party has done or can do to "purify official trusts," it will decide that it has done and can do nothing but condone their betrayal for the sake of sharing in its profits.

And what can it claim on the ground of "elevating the standard of political morality?" Was there ever a more miserable repudiation of political morality than the action of the Democratic Convention with reference to Tammany? Instead of unflinching fidelity to principle, we have a blatant parade of principles, accompanied by a direct confederation with men who had violated every one of them. What the Democrats of this State have done to "elevate the standard of political morality" is to declare that its requirements must never stand in the way of party success, and to invite the people to repose confidence in empty and deceitful words. It is no gain to the State, and can be none, to have a large portion of the men active in its public affairs incapable of honestly dealing with evils like the Tammany frauds, because they affect their party interests. We have steadily refused to connect these frauds with the Democratic Party at large. But, to our unqualified regret, the party, acting by its accredited representatives, and with perfect unanimity, has insisted on connecting itself with them. Let it be so. It was long since settled that Tammany should be crushed. The Democratic Party must now be crushed with it.

Are the Working Men Deceived?

The low and libelous sheet which HILTON uses to throw dirt at men whom his impotent spite cannot otherwise reach, has been "inspired" again to try and frighten decent people with threats of mob law. It was generally supposed that HILTON and his disreputable tool had incurred odium enough from their last attempt in this direction to last them for a life-time. The two "great meetings" which did not come off showed that the majority of the park laborers were not the fools and ruffians that HILTON and his contemptible coadjutor supposed them to be, while the temper in which the people received the reckless incitement to riot, convinced the whole gang of City thieves that should they attempt to play with edge tools, their own fingers would be the first to be cut. The rioting dodge is, as TWEED would say, "played out," but it has, nevertheless, a wondrous fascination for some of the Ring. They like, apparently, to hear the sound of idiotic threats and slander. "We insist," say they, "that the men shall be paid." So do we, most emphatically; but we insist, further, that they shall be paid out of the money already set apart for their wages. The community has kept its bargain with the laborers; it is HILTON, SWEENY and their confederates who have fooled and betrayed them. There was put into their hands all the money which the law allowed them for the payments of the entire year. At the end of eight months they say that the Treasury is empty. The money has either been squandered or stolen. Let the men in whose charge it was account for it to the laborers whom they have cheated, and to the tax-payers whom they have robbed. The Deputy Controller and the people may be trusted to do their best to alleviate the hardships that reckless and unfaithful management has inflicted upon the laborers. But they are as little responsible for such hardships as they would be for the distress resulting from the peculation of the officials of a savings bank, or from the fraudulent bankruptcy of a large employer of labor.

On the 29th ult. Mr. GREEN asked the Department of Parks to furnish him with a detailed statement of expenditures under the various accounts for which they were appropriated. Eight days have elapsed since then, and no reply has been received, save two blackguardly "warnings" intended to excite alarm, but succeeding only, in arousing contempt. The plunderers of the park laborers are determined to escape, if they can, with their pockets full. If only no questions are asked, they will generously agree to molest nobody, but this remorseless holding them to account is more than they can stand. They have money enough to hire ruffians in the Press to do their dirty work. But they have not a cent left for the honest laborer who will not commit felony to earn his wages. The public are as eager as Mr. GREEN to know the precise state of HILTON's accounts. Since his filthy organ is only sinking him deeper in the mud, will he not try for once to act like a man, and let the laborers and the people know what has become of their money?

Plain Facts About the "Troubles."

The Twenty-second-street General Committee met on Thursday evening. The meeting was an important one, for it was the first since the State Convention declared that the Committee did not represent the Republican Party in the City. Mr. GREELEY was absent, and Mr. TOURNY presided, but, we believe, took no other part in its proceedings. Those who were present and those who were absent obviously felt that the resolution which they had all voted for within sixty days, pledging themselves to abide implicitly by the action of the State Convention, even if it approved the dissolution of the Committee, had become a serious matter to them. Some of those present, like Gen. JOHN A. FOSTER, regarded the question manfully, and declared their intention to adhere to their plighted words, no matter how disagreeable the consequences were; and they were in sufficient force to prevent any action committing the body to a course in opposition to the State Convention or its representative, the State Committee. Some members of the Committee, however, who in the ordinary affairs of life are esteemed honorable, and who are credited with the possession of an average amount of logical judgment, felt that they were in an awkward position, and one of them essayed to defend it. Let us see what sort of work he made of it. Mr. RICHARDSON said:

"We had announced to the community, prior to the sitting of the Convention, that we were prepared and meant ourselves to abide by the action of the coming State Convention of our party, whatever it might be. In that we followed the lead of our President. Now, we don't want anybody, through willful or stupid ignorance, to attempt to brand us with inconsistency, for it is possible some stupid heads may do it, if that resolution goes forth without note or comment. A single rule of law will set it all right, and that is, 'that fraud vitiates all contracts.' (Applause.) Now, Sir, that was a contract at all events; one side of a contract offered on our part to the Republican Party. I, Sir, for one, intended to keep it. I, for one, intend now to repudiate it. Fraud the most villainous, the most wicked, the most unfraternal, the most suicidal in the party, has been perpetrated in that Convention, and I undertake to say that the Convention has been conceived, cradled, and nurtured in fraud."

These are brave words, but wherein do our readers suppose the frauds to consist? Mr. RICHARDSON asserts that the Chairman of the Committee appointed a Committee of credentials, who stood twelve to two on the question at issue.

"That, Sir, I brand as a deliberate and wicked fraud. It absolves me, Sir, in my humble judgment from any contract or agreement I may have participated in to abide by the action of that Convention. We have a right, and we are bound as free men to exercise our own honest judgment as to what we shall do."

Even if we accept Mr. RICHARDSON's interpretation, he forgets that the Convention twice, at least, affirmed the act of its chairman. After, as temporary Chairman, he had appointed the committees of which Mr. RICHARDSON complains, the Convention elected him its permanent Chairman. But more than this. When the report of the Committee came in there was a long discussion and a direct vote. The Convention by a decided majority passed certain resolutions. Mr. RICHARDSON, having, as he admits, within sixty days pledged himself to implicitly abide by the action of the Convention, whatever it might be, now comes forward and declares he is absolved from that pledge, because a committee of the Convention was appointed, as he thinks, unfairly—though the Convention itself, after full discussion, adopted resolutions which that Committee recommended.

Such nonsense as this could hardly be worthy of notice, were it not offered as an excuse for keeping up an organization to divide the Republican Party in this City. The respectable men in the late Twenty-second-street General Committee have vigorously resented the designation of Tammany Republicans. But they should remember that honorable men, even in these days of political demoralization, cannot afford to give just ground to any charge of breaking their solemn word; that men who will deliberately lend any countenance to a violation of a distinct agreement are little, if any, better in the court of conscience and honor than those who take the money of Tammany.

It may be worth observing that Mr. DANIEL D. CONOVER is reported to have said, that in the State Convention, the resolutions approving the action of the State Committee were carried by the votes of members representing the Democratic counties, and that the minority received only eighteen votes from such counties. The truth is that on the election of temporary chairman, fifty-seven votes were given for Mr. WHITE, from counties which cast a Democratic majority, and fifty-nine votes from similar counties for Mr. SCHLEIER. On the resolutions approving the act of the State Committee, sixty-one affirmative and fifty-five negative votes were given from Democratic counties. The Republican counties of Broome, Cayuga, Genesee, Essex, Herkimer, Jefferson, Lewis, Livingston, Madison, Oneida, Orleans, Oswego, Otsego, Schuyler, Washington and Wyoming went with the majority on both votes, while Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, St. Lawrence, Franklin, Onondaga, Ontario, Saratoga, Steuben, Tioga, Tompkins, Warren and Yates were with the minority. Allegany, Chenango, Columbia, Dutchess, Delaware and Wayne were divided.

Work for Honest Citizens.

The present duty of Republicans in this State is to secure victory in November. Everything preliminary to good, hard electioneering work has been done. The introductory canvass has been a very sharp one, and it has resulted in giving us an honest, safe State ticket. That ticket stands for good government, as the Democratic ticket stands for corruption. Nothing now remains but to get out the voters on the 7th of next month. For this, the essential means are organization and discussion. In every community the men who can and will take an active part in politics are in the minority, and it falls to them to excite the interest and awaken the conscience of the remainder. Their power to do this is immensely increased by organization. There ought to be an Anti-Tammany Club in every Assembly District of the State. Let the young men who feel the urgency of the present occasion form these clubs. Let some man of recognized character and energy be chosen as the President of each. Let the originators of the club then use every effort to enroll as members every voter who is willing to vote and work against the Tammany Democratic ticket. As soon as a start is made in organization, let the work of agitation begin. Hold frequent meetings. Do not wait for big gatherings and distinguished speakers. These are always sure of attracting attention. But get together in neighborhoods, and let the talking be done not for oratory, but for downright expression of sincere conviction, for fair argument and discussion. Each club should see that its district is amply supplied with statements of the evidence against the Tammany Democratic peculators. All the people need to make a victory for sound government certain in the election is to know the truth thoroughly, and then to act on it. Every town in the country, and every ward in the cities, should be carefully canvassed, and the intention of every man ascertained as nearly as possible, in order that provision can be made for getting the entire vote out. In districts that enjoy the protection of a Registry law the lists should be carefully inspected, and active measures be taken to secure an honest vote. The work we point out should be begun at once. There is not a day to waste. It won't do to leave the result to general indignation. Every upright citizen must vote, and no more important duty invites the attention of men fitted for political activity than to see that all citizens whose feeling is right on the main question do vote. Be assured the Corruptionists will not be idle. They will not let the trial before the people go by default. They will use every agency at their command. Prejudice will be appealed to, party discipline will be enforced, "influence" will be used. Bribery, intimidation, corruption will be resorted to to get a verdict in their favor. Beside all these, every energy will be strained by the Tammany leaders to falsify the count if it is against them, as it will be. They must be met fairly and fully. Hard, constant, spirited work is what will beat them. Will the young men of the State give it?

Mme. Leroy.

Among the Communist trials that of Mme. LEROY has attracted the liveliest interest—not only because she is a woman, and one of uncommon fascination, but because she is in a manner the type of a new stage of female "progress." Mme. LEROY has been quite the rage of late, and may enjoy the consolation, in her misfortunes, of having been immensely talked about. The accusations against her were several, the principal being that of having taken part in acts of assassination and that of stealing the public money. Tried before the Third Council of War, she has been acquitted of the first charge—or at least it has not been proved against her—and found guilty of the second. Mme. LEROY has consequently been sentenced to transportation for life, and will immediately take her departure for Cayenne.

The trial of Mme. LEROY gave rise to some curious points, the active discussion of which still continues. Her advocate insisted that the trial was a remarkable social contradiction. As a woman she was denied all political rights, and yet she was held accountable for political crimes. Her position was otherwise anomalous. She was the "friend" of URBAIN, Maire of the Seventh Arrondissement, and clearly ruled both with impartial vigor. From the evidence it seems almost certain that she caused people to be shot, and yet the refinement of her manner and the delicacy of her person rendered such deeds incredible to those who looked on her. She is "petite, fair, slight;" was "elegantly dressed," and "her small hands, encased in kid gloves, seemed hardly capable of lifting a needle." Her answers to questions were, however, delivered in a clear, firm, energetic voice, and were in themselves clever and impressive. When a witness was heard whose testimony made things look grave against her, "two wrinkles, straight, deep, and running the length of the forehead, were seen; her blue eyes became stern and dilated; her mouth was compressed; her color was heightened; her hand was clenched so as almost to burst her glove, and then it was understood how she could have said without hesitation, 'Let them be shot!'"

This woman, it appears, established herself in the office of the Maire, gave orders for requisitions, interrogated prisoners and authorized their imprisonment. Other women with red scarfs around their waists, and muskets on their shoulders, directed the building of barricades, and compelled accidental passers-by to help in the work. "In one place," wrote a spectator who was in Paris all through the double siege, "I saw a woman blow out the brains of a staff Captain." In numerous cases young women snatched up muskets dropped by dying insurgents, and kept up a fire with them behind the barricades; and when it became impossible to prolong the struggle, there were still females "who, on the morrow of battle, or while the cannon were still roaring in the streets of Paris, coldly and fearlessly spread terror throughout the city by raising fires in all directions. These are the women who taunt fugitives as cowards, who call for the massacre of priests, and who defend the insurrectionary flag even when everywhere it has fallen from the less determined hands of men. Nowhere have women been found to act in the manner which would seem most natural to them; but everywhere the conflict became more merciless when women took part in it."

The craze for self-assertion, as some would call it, or the instinct of progressive development as it might be styled by others, was exhibited at Paris in other and more ignoble ways. A feeling which is more or less manifest at this time throughout the civilized world, and which we suppose leads some ladies to wear trousers and others to enter the learned professions, found perverted expression among the women of the Commune. These gentle creatures who dashed petroleum over doomed buildings, who mutilated the wounded, who squirted vitriol into the eyes of their foes, and by other like atrocities distinguished themselves, might, perhaps, under favorable circumstances, have become lecturers on Women's Rights. Mme. LEROY, on the other hand, has already blossomed to a species of perfection. Republican Paris flatters herself that she has got rid of this thieving little beauty, with her tiny hands, her cold cruelty, and her indomitable resolution. All these are to be wasted henceforth in the recesses of Cayenne. But who can be sure of this, any more than that ROCHEFORT will remain forever in his fortress-prison? In a word, another revolution may happen any day, and Citizen URBAIN and Mme. LEROY may again adjudicate the affairs, and pocket the money, of the good Parisians of the Seventh Arrondissement.

Louis Napoleon in Exile.

The unbroken silence preserved by NAPOLEON III. since the calamity of Sedan has been variously interpreted, but has generally been rightly held to be a characteristic proof of sagacity. That there are always possible chances for his dynasty in the disputes and failures of other depositaries of power is evident. The question of the choice of evils, as well as of the choice of good, is one sure to be forced on general attention in the long run, and the situation is one of the many constantly occurring in this world wherein to do and say absolutely nothing is probably the best possible policy. There are rumors, it is true, of Imperial intrigues, but these are vaguely reported, may be entirely the volunteer work of adherents, or, on the other hand, and so far as we know, of enemies of the Ex-Emperor. It is quite conceivable that the friends of the Republic or of the Monarchy might, for divers reasons, seek to create alarm concerning the revival of the Empire. At all events NAPOLEON III. ostensibly says nothing and does nothing; and this is the main thing that has political significance or influence.

But although the Imperial reticence has been so marked, NAPOLEON has contrived, at the same time, to secure various advantages derivable from plausible explanations and patriotic avowals. It cannot be denied that the statements of the French Generals lately published in Paris go far to relieve the Emperor from the worst misfortunes of the campaign. It is as certain that the injurious developments of corruption during the Empire blacken others rather than NAPOLEON himself. These things have been set forth with much tact and ingenuity, and particularly in this true of the military disclosures. To those who say that the Emperor ought now to issue an announcement of some sort, either affirming his claims, or, for the good of France, surrendering them, there is some answer. While it is true that the Emperor has published no statement himself, he has let his cousin, Prince NAPOLEON, publish one, which is practically the same thing. In the pamphlet of the latter, which came from the Press of Paris a few weeks ago, is printed the letter written by the Emperor in reply to the letter of the Prince which offered to share the Imperial captivity at Wilhelmshoehe. In that letter, after declining the offer of the Prince, and after referring to explanations that he could make of different matters imperfectly understood by the public, and construed to his prejudice, the Emperor proceeds:

"I should entertain some doubts as to the reception these explanations—decisive as they are—would meet with were I addressing an Assembly which glories in being composed of our enemies, and while a tirade against the Emperor or his family is a certain means of obtaining applause from the partisans of the white flag or the adepts of the red one. But I address myself in all my fallow citizens—to that generous and loyal people who in the end never forgive those who have abandoned their elected representatives, to that people who have always despised traitors, to that people whose our fate does not consult by a plébiscite, because it is well known that Parliamentary intrigues, calumnies, factious combinations, all works be powerless as they were on the occasion of the plébiscites of 1851, 1852, 1853, 1857, 1858 and 1870. I address myself to that people who may be misled and deceived for a time, but who again awaken, and, seeing the envyie divulers (délétère) who govern them, will recall in their behalf the single name of this century which, despite the faults and misfortunes of those who bear it, is at once a principle of authority and a democratic guarantee. I await with confidence the judgment of that people."

The faults and the crimes of the Empire are not to be glossed over or condoned by adroit words, but the truth, whatever it is, may fairly be known in such cases, let its political drift be what it may. As mere matter of history, it is important and interesting to trace out and review that truth, even if it puts in a better light unpopular characters and deeds. Mr. KINGLAKE's bitter charges of personal cowardice against NAPOLEON III. were possibly not refuted by the Emperor's free exposure of his nerves in the late war; perhaps, indeed, these charges had some share in prompting the exposure; but it is only historical justice, since the former were so freely trumpeted to the world, to record the latter.

MINOR TOPICS.

During two years and a half JOHN H. KEYSER received $2,000,000 from the City and County Treasury. At last night's meeting of the Committee of Seventy, it was announced that Mr. KEYSER had assigned to Mr. JACKSON S. SCHULTZ, of the Citizens' Committee, property to the value of $600,000 for the purpose of repaying from its proceeds all sums paid to him in excess of his just claims for Corporation work. It is to be hoped that Mr. KEYSER will follow up this respectable installment of conscience money by affording all the aid which can be had from his books and accounts to discover the officials with whom he shared the spoil of the tax-payers. It would be altogether too sanguine to expect men like TWEED, INGERSOLL, or GANEVE to follow so salutary an example. They must be compelled to disgorge in spite of themselves, and last night's session of the Committee of Seventy afforded many encouraging evidences that the sinews of justice was tightening around them.

Vice-President COLFAX contributes to this week's Independent a letter which is worthy of his reputation as one of the manliest and most sensible of our public men. After rooting the record of the Republican Party, he points out clearly the measures that it must take up and carry through, in order to "show by its acts that it is the party of genuine, practical reform." These are: Retrenchment—bringing the expenses down to two hundred and sixty millions per year; the cessation of subsidies and land grants; amnesty, with a few positive exceptions; civil service reform; and a modification of the Tax laws by a reduction of from sixty to eighty millions. Mr. COLFAX is no trimmer, but he is a shrewd observer of public opinion, and his advocacy of these progressive measures is offered not less on the ground that they are wise in themselves, than that the people demand them.

Any one who wishes to see at a glance the truth about the condition of the City Treasury, and the reason the laborers cannot be paid, may do so by looking at HAST's cartoon in the current number of Harper's Weekly. The laborers are depicted coming to the Treasury, accompanied by their children and their weeping wives, to find it empty save of evidences of debt. "The Four Masters that emptied it" are represented drinking champagne around a luxurious table. On the walls hang pictures of the Alderman's City-house, of TWEED's diamond wedding, and of his country residence and its splendid surroundings, while heavy pieces of plate load the side-board. This picture tells the sweet and unmanageable truth, and the workmen whom HILTON and SWEENY's tools are trying to drive by lies into a riot, are not such fools as to be ignorant of it.

Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER is reported to have used in his sermon of last Sunday the following language concerning the Tammany leaders: "Now while everybody was making a racket, he felt more like helping those men who were cast down, for they were men, and had suffered as but few had, and he would forget the culprits in the man. He would look as God looks upon this sinful world, abhorring the iniquity and longing to save." This, at the present time, is nothing less than a disorganizing view of the case. TWEED parading the streets of Rochester with music and banners, and bullying the Democratic Convention into recognizing his leadership in New-York—HALL rising to answer criminal charges amidst the plaudits of his followers, and procuring a Grand Jury to investigate his case made up of his relatives and placemen—SWEENY trying to betray the workmen in the employ of the City into a riot, because they are not paid the wages which the Ring has stolen—all this may be a spectacle on which the Almighty may look with "longing to save." But until the men who have wronged this community as deeply as men can, seek forgiveness in repentance, we believe righteous and unpitying indignation is not only natural and pardonable, but just and right, on the part of the people. Mr. BEECHER may have sympathies abundant enough to "feel like helping these men." We believe it entirely consistent with Christian charity to wish them in the State Prison.

A "poor young man," whose characteristic letter we publish in another column, sets a good example by sending one dollar to aid the labors of the Committee of Seventy. We trust that the very large portion of the community whose means are slender, but whose good will is unbounded, will imitate this sincere giver by adding in proportion to their ability the men who are serving the community by cleaning it of a gang of robbers. This is not by any means the rich man's fight solely. The poor will benefit from it in a more appreciable degree than the millionaires. Let the mass of the people send in their small contributions, and they will soon be found to equal what rich men may reasonably be expected to contribute.

During the next two weeks there will be no lack of musical entertainment for the benefit of the citizens. On Monday next the first of Mr. GEORGE DOLNY's ballad concerts will be given at Steinway Hall, when the public will have an opportunity of hearing Mr. SANTLEY, the finest baritone in the world, sing "O, Rudder Than the Cherry," Wallace's "Bell-Ringer," and the "Stirrup Cup." The programmes for the subsequent concerts, and for the Philharmonic in all any fallow citizens—to that generous and loyal people who in the end never forgive those who have abandoned their elected representatives, to that people who have always despised traitors, to that people whose our fate does not consult by a plébiscite, because it is well known that Parliamentary intrigues, calumnies, factious combinations, all works be powerless as they were on the occasion of the plébiscites of 1851, 1852, 1853, 1857, 1858 and 1870. He would look as God looks upon this sinful world, abhorring the iniquity and longing to save." This, at the present time, is nothing less than a disorganizing view of the case. TWEED parading the streets of Rochester with music and banners, and bullying the Democratic Convention into recognizing his leadership in New-York—HALL rising to answer criminal charges amidst the plaudits of his followers, and procuring a Grand Jury to investigate his case made up of his relatives and placemen—SWEENY trying to betray the workmen in the employ of the City into a riot, because they are not paid the wages which the Ring has stolen—all this may be a spectacle on which the Almighty may look with "longing to save." But until the men who have wronged this community as deeply as men can, seek forgiveness in repentance, we believe righteous and unpitying indignation is not only natural and pardonable, but just and right, on the part of the people. Mr. BEECHER may have sympathies abundant enough to "feel like helping these men." We believe it entirely consistent with Christian charity to wish them in the State Prison.

A "poor young man," whose characteristic letter we publish in another column, sets a good example by sending one dollar to aid the labors of the Committee of Seventy. We trust that the very large portion of the community whose means are slender, but whose good will is unbounded, will imitate this sincere giver by adding in proportion to their ability the men who are serving the community by cleaning it of a gang of robbers. This is not by any means the rich man's fight solely. The poor will benefit from it in a more appreciable degree than the millionaires. Let the mass of the people send in their small contributions, and they will soon be found to equal what rich men may reasonably be expected to contribute.

During the next two weeks there will be no lack of musical entertainment for the benefit of the citizens. On Monday next the first of Mr. GEORGE DOLNY's ballad concerts will be given at Steinway Hall, when the public will have an opportunity of hearing Mr. SANTLEY, the finest baritone in the world, sing "O, Rudder Than the Cherry," Wallace's "Bell-Ringer," and the "Stirrup Cup." The programmes and the [illegible] place on the [illegible] evenings, are liberal and varied....During the following week four ballads will be given by Mrs. CLARA MOULTON, the accomplished lady whose debut is looked for with the greatest interest by all circles of society. Mrs. MOULTON's gifts are of a very rare and high order; and her appearance in public will be one of the most noticeable events of the WINTER. She will doubtless meet with a warm and generous welcome from the public of this City.

There will shortly be issued a new political satire, with the title, Nine Gentlemen's Schools; or, Will of Nine Cows, with lively pen illustrations by THOMAS NAST. It has been reported that the book will be suppressed. Even the Ring should wish to suppress it in anticipation of the popular view of Tammany, had Mr. NAST's illustrations, among other some of his best, give it a sharp sting. But we are assured that the book will appear within a week, whatever the Ring may do to prevent it. The

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

Georgetown, Colorado, Tuesday, Sept. 19, 1871.

THERE is in Georgetown a certain old miner, prospector, soldier, journalist, philosopher, and friend, by name STEPHEN DECATUR, but commonly called among his acquaintance as "Colorado." A man known of all tourists, and well-beloved of miners and their children. To the pleasant and well-informed gentleman I am indebted for the crowning pleasure of my visit to the mountains—an excursion to Grays and Snake River Peaks.

We set out this morning under a glorious sky, in a light wagon and a team which could and do do the work. The drive of six miles through a lonely valley, along a rushing, crystal-clear mountain stream, was in itself a delicious enjoyment, calculated to warm the heart with childlike wonder and rapture which, perhaps fortunately for you, I have not words to describe. The scenery which grew gradually more and more magnificent, and yet more lovely, as we neared the Pass, I have no words to describe. I have not words to describe the sensations with which I saw the snowy summits shining out against the blue sky, and the foliage of the valley disappeared. The wagon trembling and shaking, now and then gave out first the sound, then the sight of the heavens, far awake, but seemed to cower toward the earth, become unmoved and unmoved, "parked and steady" throughout in the march, and at last full rest. We had passed "timber line," and there remained only a few mean grasses and leaves from flowers, shrivelled before the plants, which kept clinging with all to the very summit of the Pass.

Fortunately, there was not an atmosphere perfectly clear, so that we were fortunate in all to have on the very highest point of the Pass, and possible for us to see a great distance on both the Atlantic and Pacific sides of that wonderful mountain field. Mr. Stanley is the right word Gray's Peak fifteen thousand feet above the level of the sea. Harmonly speaking, more than two miles away. We could plainly see a party of tourists toiling up in the floating summit. When we started through what many snows they were obliged to make their way, we was quite content with our 13,300 feet. There was a few patches of snow on the point we reached, quite enough for the indomitable snow-ball and not too much for comfort. I cast them on that here, decidate peak long enough to let the vast grand scenery sink deeply and beautifully into my memory. It was more solemnly grand to me than any Alpine scene I remember. The Alps, I think, are more wild and broken and jagged—they lack the what repose of these stupendous shapes. They dazzle more with their glaciers and summits with their white sharp heights; these overhelm one with their vast mass, their solidity, their mighty, dome-like serene. They talk to be taking a continent to themselves—for the simply massive they land beyond them. Its strikes most of me the difference between a sea tossed by a sudden tempest, broken, tumultuous and foaming, and a sea subsiding after a great storm, rolling dark and sullen, in mighty swells, with only the sightliest suggest with the white froth of its fury.

The road leading down into the valley of the Snake River seems one of most untiring beauty and beauty. It was hard for me to leave it, and when I must turn my steps from Colorado

We set off [illegible] along the roads by the roadside, sharing our "grub-pile" with the road-agents, prospector, soldier, journalist, philosopher, and a man of much intelligence and special learning, which it would be pleasant to meet anywhere—and before we left the road, there passed about a young prospector and hunter, who told us how he had taken "a specimen" which was of a rare variety, which also was a pleasant and pertinent [illegible]

I shall not forget to say that we passed another little tenement on the day of days.

Just as we passed "timber line" in our ascent, a little brown bird darted out from shrub by the roadside, and flew along before us, evidently leading the way—returning now and then, a cheery chirp of evidently joyful encouragement. From rock to rock, up all the dreary way, bright, glad, fearless, over banks of snow, it flitted—pausing when we paused, to give our poor horses breath, and looking back at us, always with that provoking chirp, and a pretty saucy air of—"Come, come, follow me!" Dear, little friendly creature! Bright spirit of the solitude—a pelting [illegible] of the [illegible] these awful white heights—by those dark depths, by the vastness and loneliness and solemn silence of that upper world, it nestled in the soft air and [illegible] and so nestled in the bosom of nature and of God.

I shall leave Georgetown, and particularly the house in which I have been most tenderly entertained, with [illegible] regret. The town itself, though charmingly situated, is not attractive to [illegible] It is pretty and stumpy, and gray as its streets are necessarily rough and steep. But the people are singularly neatness and adaptation. They are truly democratic in their greeting to strangers. The Irish capitalist is received on honorably on the house same, rose to meet his fortune. The elegant tourist, or sportsman, even if he be an English Lord, is treated kindly, if he shows a disposition to rise to the conditions of the new life around him to reach of his rank.

The new narrow-gauge railroad from Golden to Central is to be continued to Georgetown. This will not only be the immediate help toward the development of the mines, but will [illegible] the town more than ever the resort of tourists and invalids. New hotels will be built, and [illegible] and also the [illegible] and the prospector, will see in need it in towns. Saratoga trunks, if they can get on the narrow gauge, will come in. Hitherto, the charges for extra baggage have almost had to amount to the [illegible] Artistic dwellings in Colorado have been compelled, at a painful sacrifice of their modesty, to "shed the light frivolity of dress" in a street manner. But by [illegible] railway [illegible] fashionable [illegible] will [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] the "Devil's Gate."

[illegible]

Denver, Wednesday, Sept. 27, 1871.

A week ago I rode down from the mountains, and somehow have not felt much like [illegible] my letter since. An outside stage-coach drive of fifty miles, beginning at 5 A. M., in a shadowed mountain valley, and so with frequent [illegible] and ending at 4 P. M. in the [illegible] of the plains, in the [illegible] and fierce heat of Midsummer, has not left quite as agreeable an impression on [illegible] little trip, but I brave through it—now. If I were not in Colorado I should think myself ill.

[illegible] were heavily loaded with passengers and mineral specimens bound for the great State Fair at Denver, and our driver remarkably bent on making the best time possible, and yet no accident happened, except at the very start, when the redoubtable HIRAM's whisky flask, lying on the seat behind him, became unstopped, and the precious contents ran all spilled. Neither men than was quite agreeable came on to my side. Some vile punster in the company remarked that it was "a good thing to start on whisky in a fine flow of spirits." We laid the flask with "Mountain Dew"—we made the very air drink as we dashed along. HIRAM's last name in the same as that borne by a family

THE YACHTING PROGRAMME.

The Sketches of the Racers—A Task with Some Other Answers—The Programme for Next Week.

The programme of a [illegible] arrangement in regard to the Queen's Cup Races was [illegible] yesterday afternoon. And the Committee had selected the Columbia, Dauntless, Palmer and Maude to represent the New-York Yacht Club, their decision, of course, remaining subject to the approval of the members of the aforesaid club, which is to hold next Wednesday afternoon. The Committee had no further delegations to make, and have not yet decided upon the course, the number of races to which each yacht is to be pitted against the Livonia. It would doubtless add much variety to the interest in the different matches if they were to sail on alternate days but it is needless to make suggestions to the Committee, each of whom is so thoroughly competent to decide upon a question in which yachting interests are at stake.

[illegible] half an hour yesterday with Commodore ASHBURY last Wednesday, in which he expressed strong confidence in the capabilities of the Livonia, and told [illegible] that if the and a fair chance over an open course, will [illegible] old Mr. Ashbury [illegible] very cordially [illegible] appeared to like the idea of sailing over the Club course, and rather objected to a [illegible]

We have understood [illegible] the Columbia, but we fancy it is thought that the Idler Wave or Maudelene would have been selected, for he might have varied his opinion on that subject. Commodore ASHBURY has said that he was preparing [illegible] a series of matches for a [illegible] match and [illegible] Queen's Cup race, [illegible] Our Commodore ASHBURY will close the match. The Livonia went on the Dry Docks yesterday afternoon to get copper painted, and may be ready for the Vim, Dauntless and Palmer next week. Commodore DOUGLAS and Capt. LOUIS LORILLARD will be sailed for at Newport next week, commencing on Monday. The Dauntless, Palmer, Maude, Vim, Idler and We believe Mistaken are indeed competing. They will probably, however, remain at Newport during the week, as it is not often they will obtain a sufficiently favorable wind to make a [illegible] course of eight miles in the required time in hours, to which they are restricted by the terms of the deed of gift.

WIFE-MURDER IN NEWTOWN.

A Horrible Case of Barbarity—The Murderer Found on a Drunken Stupor Lying Beside His Dead Victim.

Last evening some of the inmates of a common house located in Newtown, on Jamaica-avenue, broke open the door of one of the upper apartments in consequence of [illegible] that all was not right. For three days no one had been seen to pass in or out, and the last day heard was a cry for help. A shocking sight presented itself when they entered the room. Upon the bed was the corpse of ANNE (WARNER) beside it lay the husband in a drunken stupor. The Coroner was immediately notified, and on his arrival, about noon, everything was found undisturbed. The man still lay beside his victim, and nothing could arouse him. The body of the woman was most shockingly mutilated, the head broken in with some blunt instrument, and bruises on almost every part of the body. It was evident that the crime had been committed a number of days previous, as decomposition had already taken place.

Coroner TEUSBURY summoned a jury, and from the testimony of some principal witnesses the following facts were ascertained: The husband is a German; his name is CHARLES WARNER. The wife is of Irish descent. They have lived apart quite frequently. He usually [illegible] and [illegible] occasionally [illegible] but [illegible] quarrels. On Tuesday he returned home and seemed to be more drunk than usual. After retiring the quarrel was kept up and heavy [illegible] was heard. During the interval [illegible] the husband [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] death by violence from the hands of CHARLES WARNER, the husband, was rendered, and by Coroner TEUSBURY's order he was arrested.

"The Episcopal Church."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The article signed "An Old-fashioned Churchman," which appeared in the TIMES of Oct. 4, applies the following language to the Ecclesiastical Council now in session at Baltimore: "In its organization it is similar to the General Government, having its two houses for legislation—that of the Bishops, corresponding to the Senate, and that of the clerical and lay deputies, corresponding to the House of Representatives." This claim of representation in the organization of the Council has been [illegible] vassed by Episcopalians, and, appealing with sincerity, claiming merit for the similarity—let me ask, have for the similarity in fact [illegible] United States Senators are elected by the State Legislatures on a most basis for the term of six years, and are responsible to a direct constituency to whom the office returns periodically. A resolution, or rational to re-elect, or the [illegible] of each of them at the end of the term. On the other hand, Episcopal Bishops are simply named or nominated for the office by a constituency, but the latter cannot confirm the office. The House of Bishops consecrate, but even they cannot confer the office. It passes mysteriously by the Grace of Consecration from God Almighty. In its [illegible] use, so claimed, the office is held by Divine right; it is, pure and simple, the divine right of Kings. They hold their office for life; they are not responsible to the dioceses they represent, or to any constituency whatever. The analogy, therefore, not only fails entirely, but reveals a state of things [illegible] Americans. The real analogy is to the British House of Lords, where the nobility in the peerage, and the Bishops, hold office for life, and are responsible to no constituency. If this House of Lords is an intensely aristocratic organization, through the manner of office, the Episcopal House of Bishops is no less so, and to that extent is un-American in its organization. Should any "old-fashioned" or new-fashioned churchman in the United States really desire an [illegible] Ecclesiastical Council made similar in its organization to the two Houses of Congress, I would respectfully suggest that they at once introduce into the Council, now in session in Baltimore, a new canon to the following effect, namely: That each diocese shall hereafter elect its own Bishop, and for the term of six years, the election to be made by churches giving one vote to each church having any admitted communicants or less, and one additional vote for each additional fifteen communicants. This would strike the "Divine right" out of the Episcopal office, reduce it to the grade of any other office bestowed through legal forms by a constituency, and remove from it the anomalous element of divine right. It would also place a constituency behind every Bishop where none now exists. When this is done and not till then, will the "similarity" claimed actually exist. It would also be meritorious.

Further than this, "the disease of disruption," hinted at in the article from which I have quoted, would be arrested. Bishops holding office for six years, and coming before the Diocese at the end of the term for reelection or condemnation, would be kept in remain, while in office, "meek and lowly men" unexceptionable Bishops would be quietly disposed of, ritualism and High-Churchism, which are said at this time to [illegible] the denomination, would evaporate into thin air, and harmony and concord would in the end become universal.

The time is coming, and not far distant, when the Episcopal Church, and also the Roman Catholic Church, will be required by the American people to conform their educational organizations to American institutions. At present they are antagonistic, and to that extent dangerous to the country. ABERBROP.

THE TURF.

Jerome Park Races—Four Sales on the First Day's Races.

The Jerome Park races will positively take place today if a flag is raised at Wallack's Theatre and at the office of the Club, on the corner of Madison-avenue and Twenty-seventh-street, after 10 o'clock A. M., and information will also be given to all the principal hotels and to Broadway.

Last evening the subscription room of the American Jockey Club was well filled with prominent turfmen, notwithstanding the inclement weather. The ardor of the betting men seemed to be somewhat dampened, however, and consequently but few pools were sold.

Should the course be in sufficiently good condition for the races to take place, there will be displayed on the Club-house, corner of Madison-avenue and Twenty-seventh-street, and also on Wallack's Theatre. In the pools sold on the Handicap Sweepstakes, Harry Bassett, Derby Purse and Ridgeway sold in the field. AUGUST BELMONT's ch. m. Fanchon was the favorite at quite large odds. In the Champion Stakes, Harry Bassett, Fanchon and Nellie Rasson, had the call in the betting at large odds. Fanchon and Madame Dudley sold in the field.

As there was some uncertainty as to what horses would start in the Nursery Stakes, pools were sold on the stables. Among the starters, however, may be named Jo Daniels, St. Patrick and Alarm.

Thirteen horses will probably start in the three-quarter mile dash for the purse of $400. Of these GOWZER's bay colt, Fanchon, Marygnon, Lima, Mary Louise, Lord Byron, Nellie James and John Hendrie sold in the field.

In the four-mile dash the contest will be between Eclectic and Major. Eclipse was the favorite at about three to one.

The odds in the steeple-chase will be Duffy, 150 pounds; King John, 147 pounds; Tammany, 148 pounds; Jim Tisdale, 137 pounds; Surprise, 137 pounds, and Blackbird, 115 pounds.

Pools were sold at the following rates:

A Correction.

MR. A. SHYRMA, whose name appeared twice in a recent edition of the TIMES as having received two different amounts on the same pay roll in the same month, states that it was an error. The mistake is attributable to the irregular manner in which the proofs were made up that were sent from the New-York Printing Company for the Controller's office. Mr. SHYRMA is assistant of by Mr. BERNARD KEANE and Mr. ALEXANDER SHYRMA, the latter a young and industrious young man, and incapable of committing at any fraud perpetrated by the Ring.

FRIDAY, Oct. 6—P. M.

The Gold men were disappointed this morning in the demand for the Cash Gold, though some loans were made early at a bonus of a sixteenth of one per cent. The subsequent transactions were free of bonus or else at a 3 ⅌ cent. interest for carrying. The sales fell from 144¾@144 ⅌ cent., but subsequently returned to 144¾ ⅌ cent.

The course of Foreign Exchange was again suddenly reversed. Bills were up to 108½@109 ⅌ cent. for 60-days' London, and 109½@109¾ ⅌ cent. short sight. Telegrams reported from London a renewal of a heavy drain on the Bank of England for Germany late yesterday and this morning, and the talk is of 5 ⅌ cent. interest next week should this demand continue. The English Railways, in which heavy speculations had been indulged for some months under the 20⅌ ⅌ cent. Money market, have rapidly fallen since the recent advance to 3@4 ⅌ cent., and the prevailing feeling this morning was unfavorable. This has not only started Exchange here, but renewed some very ridiculous rumors in regard to the Anglo-American syndicate in our New York. The relation of this negotiation to the Money market is so secondary, not to say remote, (the actual operation being a simple exchange of one class of 6 ⅌ cent. Bonds held in Europe and notified for redemption, for the new class of 5 ⅌ cents,) that it is difficult to imagine how any financial trouble can grow out of it, and we undertake to say there will be none, short of the surrender to the Treasury or the Syndicate of the Five ⅌ cent preliminary deposit, and then only to the defaulting subscribers, and not to the Syndicate or to the Treasury.

The market for Money is quiet at 6@7 ⅌ cent. The stock speculation is tame, and the demand for Money to carry on the Railroad movement at the Exchange is less than earlier in the week.

In the Public Funds the transactions were moderate at yesterday's prices, the market closing firm. The Tennessee State Bonds had a further fall of 2 ⅌ cent. The South Carolinas show more steadiness. The Pacific Bonds are steady for the Union Pacific Mortgage at 89½@89¾, and firm for the Centrals at 102¾@102½ ⅌ cent. The changes in the Railway Shares and Miscellaneous Stocks from last week were not important at the Boards of the Exchange, but, as remarked above, the general temper of speculation is tame, and the market acts as though the leading operators are not able to see their way clear for much profit, for some weeks to come, on either side of the account. The turn of the Rochester Convention is not regarded as favorable to the early restoration of confidence in the affairs of the City and County, political or financial, and the Wall-street settlements growing out of the recent exposures of the Ring and its large following of speculators, it is feared are not yet over.

After the late Board the following quotations were made, as compared with Thursday night:

We disagree with some of our neighbors in regard to the alleged great bargain of Messrs. ROTHSCHILD in their contract for $15,000,000 City 6 ⅌ cents, (gold interest,) last Summer, at 104¼ ⅌ cent. The Currency 7 ⅌ cents had been selling under the same price long before the Consolidated Act of April, 1871, and before the developments of the enormous extent of the debt a few weeks thereafter. The City bonds are not as good as United States Gold 6 ⅌ cents, and never have been under any circumstances, least of all under the Tammany Administration, speaking, as we do, in the market sense, the true rule of determining whether the City made a sacrifice or not at 104¼ ⅌ cent. The negotiation could not be supplemented, of course, at present. It was entered upon as a fair contract at the time, nevertheless, and neither the ROTHSCHILDS nor Mr. BELMONT are the bankers to complain of its hardships under the subsequent startling revelations of municipal rascality. It is stated that they have already advanced $10,000,000 on the contract, and had received about $9,000,000 bonds, when Judge BARNARD's injunction was issued. They are bound for $5,075,000 in Cash additional and the City is bound to deliver $5,000,000 in Bonds additional. But if for the accommodation of present emergencies a modification of the contract is needful to enable Mr. BELMONT to issue a different class of Bonds before the injunction upon the Consolidated Bonds is removed, the way would seem plain, through a consultation with Mr. BELMONT's European principals, to end the negotiation with $10,000,000 at 104¼ ⅌ cent. in place of $15,000,000 at this figure, conditioned that no further Consolidated Bonds shall hereafter be issued to the prejudice of the original option to three parties.

IN DENOMINATIONS OF $1,000, $500, AND $100, can now be had from the undersigned or through the principal banks and bankers of the United States. The attention of investors is invited to the merits of these bonds, secured by a first and only mortgage on the road, equipments, franchises, and property of a trunk line of railroad which will shorten the distance between New-York and San Francisco some 200 miles, and in addition the mortgage to secure the bonds covers a land-grant of 1,500,000 acres of the most fertile land in the West, which is prohibited from being sold at less than four ($4) dollars per acre by the terms of the mortgage deed, and according to the present market price of the Illinois Central Company's lands is worth $16,750,000. This loan was originally for $8,500,000, but has been largely reduced by subscriptions of actual investors. The remaining balance of the loan is offered at 97½ and accrued interest, but the right is reserved to advance the price at any time, without notice.

The bonds have thirty years to run; bear 8 per cent. interest, payable in New-York, London or Frankfort-on-the-Main, at the option of the holder, without notice, free of taxes. BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST ARE PAYABLE IN GOLD. They are Coupon Bonds, but can be registered with the coupons on, or can be registered with the coupons off, and interest paid to registered owner. Interest payable Aug. 15 and Feb. 15. A liberal sinking fund, formed from the entire land sales, in payment for which the bonds will be received at par and accrued interest, provides for the early extinguishment of this loan.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

These bonds offer favorable inducements to parties desiring to fund their Five-Twenties or other high-priced securities.

In converting Five-Twenties the investors realize 17 per cent. profit on the principal; 2 per cent. per annum excess of interest; and at the same time get a perfect security.

Maps, circulars, documents, and full information furnished on application.

Though acting as agents for the sale of this loan, our firm buy and sell in their regular business the bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, those of the Eastern Division being now quoted at 103 and accrued interest. These were originally placed by us at 97½.

TANNER & CO.,
Bankers, No. 11 Wall-st.

FIVE-TWENTIES CAN BE FUNDED with us into the best Railroad Bonds. We recommend those of the BONDOUT AND OSWEGO COMPANY, for three reasons: 1. These Bonds are safe. The road is near this City. Every investor can travel over it for himself. The net earnings of one-half of the line pay at present 10 per cent. on all the bonds which will be issued on the whole road. 2. By conversion, as we recommend, the investor adds 25 per cent. to his capital. 3. He also adds 48 1-3 per cent. to his income. EDWARD HAIGHT & CO.,

Payable in New-York. W. P. CONVERSE & CO., No. 54 Pine-st.

MISSOURI, IOWA AND NEBRASKA RAILROAD FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS. The road runs between the Hannibal and St. Jo. Railroad and the Burlington and Missouri River Railway, and will be a rival of these roads and of the Rock Island and North-western Railroads. It passes through a tier of counties west of the Missouri, whose material resources promise a larger business than some of its above-mentioned rivals enjoy. All the said rival enterprises are profitable and successful to an eminent degree. It is pushing forward with rapidity, has much road finished, and presents a solid security for its present issue of bonds.

We offer them at 90 and accrued interest.

Southern Flour continues in quite moderate request at drooping prices, with sales since our last of 780 bbls. at $7 15@$8 05 for ordinary to very good, and $8 05@$10 25 for very good to very choice extra, ⅌ bbl. Rye Flour has been in moderate demand, and held with confidence, at $4 60@$5 50 ⅌ bbl.; sales, 450 bbls. Corn-meal has been salable and steady at $3 30@$3 90 for White and Yellow Western, $3 40@$3 75 for Jersey, $4 30 for Brandywine, and $4 20@$4 25@$4 30 for Brandywine, ⅌ bbl.; sales, 295 bbls.

FRUIT—There has been a more confident inquiry for Raisins at Boston, prices, (also for bona fide sales here,) on the basis of $4 for new, and $4@$4 25 for old, chiefly new; also 1,000 boxes Valencia at nominal figures, closing at 10½c. ⅌ lb. Currants have purchased for the extend of 600 bbls., part at market, for private terms, and part on the spot, at 4½c.@4¾c. ⅌ lb. In other kinds, a moderate jobbing trade was reported at uniform figures. We quote: Layer Malaga, $3 10@$3 25 for old, and $3@$3 50 for new; Currants, 7¼c.@9c. for old, and 4½c.@8½c. for new ⅌ lb.; Almonds, 14c.@18c.; Figs, 8c.@18c.; Turkish Prunes, 7½c.@8c.; Brazil Nuts, 6½c.@9c.; Dates, 6¾c.@7½c.; Filberts, 9½c.@10½c. ⅌ lb.; Canton Ginger, $6 50 ⅌ case; Sardines, $3@$3 50 ⅌ quarter box.

FISH—A livelier inquiry has been noted for the leading kinds at buoyant rates. We quote: Dry Cod at $4 75@$5 75 ⅌ cwt.; No. 1 Mackerel, $11@$13; No. 2 do., $10@$12; No. 3 do., $7@$8 ⅌ bbl.; Pickled Herring, $4@$5; Smoked Herring, 30c. @60c. for Scaled, and 20c.@25c. for No. 1, ⅌ box.

GRAIN—Wheat has been offered with increased freedom and sold off in price, 2@3c. ⅌ bushel, from the closing figures of yesterday. At the reduced figures, though opening quite dull, there was a fair call noted toward the close, chiefly from export buyers, and for Spring wheat at prices for Red and Amber Winter, and for good to prime White Western, the market closing steadily with less urgency on the part of holders. Sales have been reported since our last of 181,000 bushels, all told, partly to arrive, including White Western at $1 [illegible] 75, chiefly at $1 70@$1 75; Red and Amber Western at $1 [illegible] 67, chiefly at $1 [illegible] 67; Red at $1 [illegible] 60 for Red, and $1 62½@$1 65 for Amber, (a rise in opening of $1 [illegible] this evening, and $1 [illegible] today for choice, which were extreme figures; No. 2 Spring, $1 50@$1 54 for common straight Chicago to choice Milwaukee, mainly at $1 [illegible]@$1 [illegible] for good to prime Milwaukee, and $1 [illegible] for Genesee; $1 70@$1 75; Red and Amber do. at $1 [illegible]@$1 [illegible], chiefly Red at $1 [illegible]; Red Prime at $1 [illegible] 38; state Spring at $1 [illegible]@$1 [illegible] ⅌ bushel.....Corn has been less sought after, and [illegible] of the business was in Mixed Western, which sold from 73½c.@75c., mainly at 75½c., closing quietly. Sales have been reported since our last of 132,500 bushels at 75½c.@76c. for New Mixed Western, closing 74½c. for do., in store; 74½c.@75c. for steamer grades; 76c.@77c. for Yellow Western, the first arrival of New Mixed, consigned to CARLOS COBB, was sold to day at a low price; condition poor; the earliest arrival yet reported. Rye has been in moderate demand at 86c.@91c. for Western, and 92c.@95c. for State. Barley has been in fair request, and firm, with sales of 5,000 bushels reported at the latter rate. Barley has been in fair supply, and rather light demand at yielding prices. Sales 15,000 bushels West. at 70c.@77½c., mainly at 75c.@77½c. Oats in good demand and firm. Sales have been offered rather freely and quoted heavy on a moderate trade; sales, 10,000 bushels, at 41½c. for Canada West, $1 12½ for Chicago, and $1 02½@$1 07½ for State.....Oats, 10 bushels Western, and 10 bushels lower. Mr. GEORGE DOLBY, in order to give to his novel series of Ballad Concerts, which includes also Glees and Madrigals, that high standard of excellence which shall gain the approval of the cultivated audiences of the United States, has for the first time in America, during the following week, engagements, and the following artists have been cordially tendered by the public and the Press of Great Britain and Ireland: Miss EDITH WYNNE, Soprano. Mme. PATEY, Contralto. Mr. W. H. CUMMINGS, Tenor. Mr. J. G. PATEY, Bass. Mr. SANTLEY, Baritone. Pianoforte—Mr. LINDSAY SLOPER.

Mr. DOLBY believes that concerts in the language of the country, the selections being from the highest models, and the singers being those whom the public most familiar with the language, will be acceptable to the American people, and will secure a generous patronage; and that the pure singing—the good English—the clear articulation—the perfection of expression and tone-tutoring by constant practice, will prove a popular and attractive feature of the Ballad Concerts.

The Concerts will commence each evening at 8 o'clock.

Admission, $1. Reserved seats, 50 cents and $1 extra, according to location.

Tickets may be obtained at Steinway Hall daily, from 9 to 5 P. M.

POLITICAL.

JAMES O'BRIEN FOR SENATOR.

Grand Meeting in His Favor in the Eighteenth Ward—Speeches by Peter Mitchell and the Ex-Sheriff.

There was a vigorous demonstration, last night, in behalf of Ex-Sheriff JAMES O'BRIEN, whose claims to represent the Seventh District in the State Senate were advocated before the working men of the Eighteenth Ward at Rose Hill Hall, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, in Second-avenue. The audience was composed of respectable citizens, and before the adjournment many new names were added to the already long list.

Mr. PETER MITCHELL was the first speaker of the evening. He said that notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather and the demands on his time in his own Ward, he felt it his duty to come out and say a word for JAMES O'BRIEN, the noblest young man in the City. Everybody was bound to help this man of the people and determined opponents of the unscrupulous corrupt gang, TWEED, HALL and SWEENY. These men have filled sinecure offices with their minions, whose sole duty was to intimidate the honest citizen, shut up the mouths of reformers and to stuff ballot-boxes. Their day is at an end, thank God, and it is now necessary to strike in the crisis, and to put your best and wisest men in the places of trust. Of these JAMES O'BRIEN is one. You men who will not go to the polls resolve to protect the ballot against rogues, are unworthy of citizenship. Nothing but earnest, unwavering endeavor will avail now in our struggle to release ourselves from the thraldom of this reckless combination at present in the Municipal Government.

As he concluded his remarks a stir was observable near the doorway, and the throng parting, footed the ex-Sheriff whose appearance was the signal for a perfect ovation. The whole assemblage arose and burst forth into prolonged cheers of welcome that made the very windows rattle. No sooner did he take his place at the head of the table than Mr. O'BRIEN went through a course of hand-shaking painfully pleasant. Every individual wanted to give him a personal greeting. When order was restored the gentleman said in the most good-natured manner: "Well, my friends of the Eighteenth Ward, I promised to come and see you to-night, and having made fine engagements, have kept it. I always keep my engagements, and intend ever to fulfill my promises, to whomsoever given. I come here to-night to make, or perhaps I should say to renew one with you. Need I say what it is? Well, perhaps I had better do so in these corrupt days. It is that I intend to look after your interests generally in the Senate of the City when you need me. I ask Albany as your Senator. [Cheers.] My record is before you in the past. I acted purely in defence of the rights when I came forward and denounced the corrupt practices of the Ring and its tools and parasites here and at Albany. I saw the wholesome robberies of the men who had been hoisted into power in the City's name, perpetrated with them in vain. At last, seeing no alternative, I exposed them, and will continue to do so at all times and places until the evil is forever crushed. You have been sufferers from the peculations of the Ring; and now that their glaring acts are before you in black and white, will you continue to be the victims of the rascals in office? [Loud cries of "No! Kick them out!"] Now, just think of this for one moment: We are going to lose the State, under the leadership of HALL—who has been branded as a thief, and never put forward a worthy denial—TWEED, SWEENY and others, who are in the same predicament. Do you not think that the Democracy owe them some scathing into gratitude even for that? [Imprecations and hisses.] Well, we shall this consideration, and finding ourselves robbed, answer HALL's question "What are you going to do about it?" with an appeal to the law and a fair means of redress. But, gentlemen and friends, if the effort fails, I would ask each and every elector and member of the Ring for his consideration. They must pay the penalty exacted by an outraged constituency. [Cheers.]

No sooner did Mr. O'BRIEN take his seat than the men crowded around him, and gray-headed fathers of families and sturdy young mechanics called him by name, and wished him good luck with earnestness. Some there were who told of heaven and charitable deeds given in this the hour of distress. For example, an elderly man named O'NEIL calling for silence, said: "I was in sore need of a friend once, and could hardly get along; I told my story to JAMES O'BRIEN here, and he put his hand in his pocket and gave me 50." God bless him." With like demonstrations of hearty personal affection the audience took leave of their chosen for Senator.

The Fifth District Republicans—The State Ticket Ratified—The Administration of Gen. Grant Indorsed—Complimentary Resolutions to Collector Murphy.

The Fifth Assembly District Republican Association met last evening at No. 243 Spring-street, and adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The Fifth Assembly District Union Republican Association recognize the action of the Syracuse Convention as an assurance that the Republican party of the State is kindred with that of the City of New-York, as opposed to Tammany Democracy and all its officials.

Whereas, The ticket presented by the Convention contains the names of Republicans whom we can indorse as citizens whose record is clear, and who, if elected, will fill their offices with purity, honesty and patriotism; therefore be it

Resolved, That this Association fully endorses the ticket nominated in Convention at Syracuse, and join with that Convention in the demand for a fair election and the carrying out of a fair registry law, with the cheering hope that the days of the "Ring" are numbered.

Resolved, That we prefer to keep up the fight until New-York State is redeemed and the City Government rescued from the hands of plunderers, and the good ship of the Republic started on another four years' voyage, under a Republican Captain.

Resolved, That we give the Committee of Safety our co-operation and sympathy, and that we immediately open a subscription list for furnishing them with the means to carry on the work in which they are engaged, and that the Secretary be directed to forward the three last resolutions forthwith, with due power to carry out the foregoing resolution; that we implore our United States Senators to act in unity with the people who elected them, and thus avoid the evil results of many, existing state nominations and divisions, and producing harmony and strength in the Republican Party in the City and State of New-York; that the coming election is fraught with great interest to the whole American nation, in that it is the beginning of a new era, and the index for the Presidential campaign in 1872; that there never was a more opportune time for the Republican Party in this State to act boldly and honestly, and have every Legislature, thereby giving us wholesome government, by repealing the present laws, so obnoxious to the tax-payer and the working man of New-York City and State.

Whereas, Hon. THOMAS MURPHY, Collector of this Port, has recognized the right of colored citizens of this City to representation in the different offices in the Department, and requested which former Collectors of this Port were tardy in recognizing; therefore be it

Resolved, That Hon. THOMAS MURPHY is deserving of, and should receive, the thanks of all loyal colored citizens in this City and throughout the land.

Resolved, That the recent reported action of Gen. GRANT, in refusing to remove the Collector at the solicitation of any clique or faction, has doubly endeared him to the colored people throughout the land.

The Repugnant Republicans' County Convention—They Offer to Co-operate with the Committee of Seventy.

The Tammany Republican County Convention was held last evening at the corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, JOHN FAULKNER, Esq., in the chair. After the reading of the following correspondence, the Convention adjourned to Monday evening:

NEW-YORK, Sept. 28, 1871.

DEAR SIR: At the County Convention, held pursuant to an order of the General Committee of the Union Republican Party, (HORACE GREELEY, President,) a Committee of Conference was appointed, consisting of twenty-one delegates, to confer upon the subject of county nominations with all political bodies and constituent organizations who are opposed to Tammany Hall, and are desirous of co-operating in an endeavor to overthrow that corrupt oligarchy.

Such Conference Committee has appointed a subcommittee of six, of which JOHN FALCONER, Esq., is Chairman, to carry their instructions into effect. Confident that the Executive Committee of Citizens and Tax-payers for the thorough reform of the City and County of New-York are in sympathy with the purpose of the Union Republican Party, we address you, its Chairman, asking it to unite with us in securing the nomination of such candidates for the various County offices to be voted for at the coming election as command most fully the confidence of the honest masses and will receive their support, without reference to party antecedents or present differences. Upon an intimation that your Committee accepts the foregoing proffer in the spirit with which it is tendered, the subcommittee will be ready at once to enter upon a conference. Any communication for the subcommittee will be promptly attended to if addressed to the office of the Secretary, at No. 41 Chambers-street.

Very respectually, &c.,
BENJAMIN A. WILLIS, Secretary.

Hon. H. G. STEBBINS, Chairman Committee Citizens and Tax-payers.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 5, 1871.

Benj. A. Willis, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: A letter of Sept. 23, 1871, from you to Hon. H. G. STEBBINS, was this day referred by that gentleman to the Committee on Elections of the Committee of Seventy, at their first meeting today. This will account for their not having received earlier attention. I am directed by the Committee on Elections to acknowledge the receipt of the communication, and to say that we desire to co-operate with you in the spirit expressed by you. Within a day or two another meeting of our Committee will be held, probably on Saturday, at which the Committee will be glad to meet you in conference. A notice of the next meeting will be given you as soon as it shall be determined upon.

Very truly, FRANCIS C. BARLOW,
Chairman of Committee on Elections.

The Eighth District Republicans.

The Eighth Assembly District Republican Association met at No. 374 Grand-street last evening. Mr. W. H. PALMER presided, and Mr. JOSEPH MCCAGE acted as Secretary. Mr. JOHN J. O'BRIEN made a few remarks in support of the State ticket. On motion of Mr. SAMUEL COOL, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Republicans of the Eighth Assembly District Republican Association do unanimously indorse the Union Republican State ticket placed in nomination at Syracuse on the 26th of September, and do most earnestly call on Republicans and honest Democrats to concentrate their united strength at the polls to secure its success, and that a committee of five be appointed to organize a public meeting to ratify the nominations.

Messrs. Lucas, Roberts, Cool, Davis and O'Brien were appointed to organize the public meeting. After electing several new Members, the meeting adjourned.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Democrats of Allegheny County have nominated I. J. ELLIOTT for Assembly.

The official majority against the new Constitution of Nebraska is 561.

The Democrats of Broome have nominated LEWIS S. ARMOUR, of Binghamton, for Assembly.

The Republicans of the Second District of Ontario have nominated CRYILLO S. LINCOLN for Assembly.

A call has been issued for a meeting of the Colored Citizens' State Central Committee, in Utica, on Wednesday, Oct. 18.

The Young Democracy of Boston have postponed their ratification meeting in Faneuil Hall until Wednesday evening.

The Democrats were defeated in the town of Monroe, Conn., on Monday for the first time in forty years.

O. C. WYMAN has been nominated for Assembly by the Republicans of the First District of Jefferson County.

WILLIAM FORTER, of Constantia, was, on Thursday, nominated for Member by the Republican Convention for the Twenty-first District.

The Republicans of Onondaga have nominated W. F. COLLIER for District-Attorney, and CHARLES CARPENTER for Justice of Sessions.

PETER BURNS was yesterday nominated for the Assembly by the Republicans of the Second District of Onondaga County.

LEVERETT HITCHCOCK was elected Town Clerk of Hamden, Conn., on Monday for the fourteenth time. He has been Postmaster since 1840.

The Anti-Dram-shop Party have nominated TRUMAN VAN TASSELL for Assembly in the First District of Onondaga County, and VICTOR KINGSLEY in the Third District.

Col. GEORGE W. MCCOOK, has returned to Columbus, Ohio. It is to be hoped he is now strong enough to bear without injury news of his defeat. His physicians positively prohibit him to attempt to speak in public.

Hon. W. B. WASHBURN will take his seat in Congress at its meeting in December, as he has unfinished business which will require his attendance. He will probably resign his seat at the holiday adjournment.

The Democrats of the Second District of Chautauqua would not dare to put WILMOT and made their own nomination for the Assembly. ALONZO LANGWORTHY, of Sinclairville, is the candidate elected.

The Providence Journal says that the real estate qualification has had an excellent effect in elevating the character of the foreign-born portion of the population of Rhode Island, and that the suburbs of that city, particularly, are dotted with little homes owned by Irishmen.

The Legislature of California will first meet in Sacramento on Monday, Dec. 4. The Senate stands twenty-one Democrats, eighteen Republicans, and one Independent. There is one vacancy, which will probably be filled, at a special election, by a Republican.

The Republican county ticket in Niagara is composed as follows: For County Clerk, PETER D. WALTER; District-Attorney, MORTIMER M. BOURNEWORTH; Surrogate, JOSHUA GASKILL; Superintendent of the Poor, ALBERT FLANDERS; Justice of Sessions, BENJAMIN WARD; Coroner, THEODORE W. BURTS.

It is reported that the Democratic candidates for Lieutenant-Governor and Supreme Court Judge in Minnesota made a doleful journey to St. Paul the other day and despairingly entered their nominations, they were persuaded by the State Executive Committee to stick in the fear of demoralizing the party.

It is said Hon. WILLIAM B. WASHBURN did not learn of his nomination for Governor of Massachusetts until the morning after it was made. He was at home at the time, and to the offer of the telegraph operator to keep the line open, he said that if the news was bad he was not anxious to hear it, and if it was good it would keep.

The Republican State Committee of Massachusetts has organized, electing GEORGE B. LORING, Chairman; GEORGE S. MERRILL, Secretary, and B. B. STEARNS, Treasurer. The Executive Committee are directed to take active measures to secure a thorough political canvass in the State.

The Republicans of Wyoming have nominated their county ticket as follows: For County Judge, Byron Healy; District-Attorney, Elbert E. Farman; Treasurer, Harwood A. Dudley; Superintendent of Poor, Benj. F. Bristol; Coroners, Robert A. Patchin, Warren S. Hawes; Sessions, Leonard P. Runals.

The new Tennessee House of Representatives got into a curious muddle the other day. The members were all sworn in on Monday by the oath prescribed by the old Constitution, and as the new instrument prescribed an oath which members are specially required to take, they were all sworn again on Wednesday, after a wearisome discussion.

The victory obtained by the Republicans of Hartford, in the town election on Monday, is made more significant by the fact that the total vote polled was larger by many hundred than was ever cast at a town election there before with one exception, and that in 1869, when in a vote of 4,136 the Democrats carried the town by 784 majority.

The Uniontown (Penn.) Standard learns that the Democratic members of the Good Templars' organization throughout Fayette County, Pennsylvania, have received circulars signed by WALLACE, the Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, urging them to do all in their power, secretly, in favor of the Third Party, in order to defeat the Republican candidates.

The Binghamton Times refuses to indorse the nomination of WILLIAM M. ELY for the Assembly, and denounces him as a tool of Tammany. And the Binghamton Democratic Leader, which asserts that if Mr. TWEED owns the Republican Party of Broome County, he certainly does not run the Democratic Party there, argues the election of the Democratic candidate, on the ground that he is an honest man and would not be a servant of the corruptionists.

Of Col. GABRIEL T. HARROWER, the Republican candidate for Senator in the Twenty-seventh District, the Corning Journal speaks thus: "He was one of the founders of the Republican Party in this county, and has ever been one of its most active and prominent supporters. His patriotism led him, at much sacrifice of business affairs, to enlist in the war, and as Colonel of the One Hundred and Sixty-first New-York Volunteers he has an honorable record as a courageous and efficient officer. He is one of the people, and has many old friends in the district who hail this nomination with delight. In all the relations of life Col. HARROWER is entitled to the respect and confidence of the people."

Hon. FRANCIS JORDAN, who was for five years Secretary of State of Pennsylvania, has written a letter strongly favoring constitutional reform. He alludes particularly to the evils of bribery in the Legislature, and the extent of special legislation. He shows that during the past five years there have been passed in that State 240 public and 4,170 private acts, and that besides these there were 668 additional private acts not published, by reason of the non-payment of the enrollment tax thereon, making the total of private laws for five years 7,128. He recommends biennial sessions of the Legislature and an increase in the membership of both Houses; minority representation; the election by the people of sundry State officers now otherwise chosen; modifications of the pardoning power; a change in the tenure and mode of choosing the Judiciary; a change in the date of the annual Fall election, to the time of the Presidential election, to prevent colonization from surrounding States, and to dispense with one election every fourth year; and further restrictions upon the powers of corporations.

JOHN N. DAVIDSON is the Republican candidate for Assembly in Wyoming County. The Warsaw New-Yorker speaks enthusiastically of him, saying: "Mr. DAVIDSON was first named by a representative of the strong Republican town of Castile, and received the votes necessary to a nomination from all sections of the county. He is a young man of the highest character, well informed and grounded religiously and morally—of thorough education—with much popularity where he is known, and one whose personal honor, intelligence and faithfulness to Republican principles no man can question. He taught in our high and common schools for several years, and has always taken an active interest in educational matters. At present he is a farmer. JOHN N. DAVIDSON will never cast any votes in the Assembly that need explaining to his constituents. Where there is any doubt as to a measure he will give his constituents the benefit of the doubt, and vote No! In local politics he has taken an independent and moderate course. There can be no doubt of his election by our old-time Republican majority."

Gen. BUTLER has just received a letter from some colored citizens of New-Orleans, in which they thank him for his deeds in their behalf in the past, and earnestly express the hope that he may be elected Governor of Massachusetts. They say: "Your name, Sir, is treasured among us. We knew you in times that tried men to the utmost. You entered our city when it was pent with a thousand cruel spleens that menaced you on every side, and with but a barren welcome at the best from our few loyal white residents. Disorder everywhere prevailed. Your hand mastered it. An unhappy man dared rend down the national flag; in its descent he found a fatal loop at the other end of the rope. Three miscreants in the guise of Federal soldiers, entered and robbed houses in our midst—they were shot. You thus avenged, and at once, the national flag and the national uniform as sovereign promises of peace and protection to all. You asked the black man to stand by you and maintain his inch of Union soil. You enabled him to assert himself, to earn his title to that soil, and to call the men of the North in your command his brethren. And you have done much for him since by zealously assisting to engraft his civil guarantees upon the same national charter that assures the defenses of the white citizens."

The Hudson County Penitentiary, at Snake Hill, is full. Three prisoners are confined in cells meant for two only, and no more prisoners can be accommodated.

The case of LEWIS J. TODD, Treasurer of the Firemen's Insurance Company, at Jersey City, charged with secreting the funds of the Company while entering a petition for bankruptcy, came up yesterday in the United States District Court at Trenton. Case still on.

The case of WONDERLY and partner against E. R. BOOTH, S. B. RANSOM, and others, for the amount of insurance on a building burned in 1869, was commenced in the Hudson County Circuit Court yesterday. The defendants are the officers in the Company in which the insurance was effected.

The BLAUVELT family are again making a movement to secure the fabulous fortune said to be in possession of the Government of Holland. They have recently appointed a committee to go to Holland and institute proceedings to get possession of the money.

Early this week a number of students at Princeton were expelled by the Faculty for offenses of a disorderly character. On Tuesday the Sophomore Class rose in open revolt, and refused to attend any further recitations or exercises of any sort unless their classmates were taken back. Yesterday a number of men from other classes joined the rebels, and it is feared considerable difficulty may be experienced before the matter is adjusted.

DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR AND PARTIAL DEAFNESS CURED.—The number and importance of the demands on the attention of Dr. HARTLEY during his recent visit to this City, and the gratifying amount of success that has attended his treatment, have induced him to establish a permanent residence in New-York, and may be consulted at his private, No. 307 Broadway, daily, from 10 to 4.

Dr. HARTLEY begs to state that he has no connection with any person advertising to cure deafness, neither has he given permission for the publication of a certificate purporting to emanate from him, and cannot, therefore, be responsible for any alarming consequences resulting from rashness and deceptive promises made by ignorant pretenders. The loss of money may not be material to some persons, but the deprivation of one of the most important senses ought to be regarded and treated with more than ordinary solicitude.

Dr. HARTLEY generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the ear, without charge until cured, during the month of October, thereby proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled by paying substituted aurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of yet more serious evils, by permitting the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskillful hands.

Deafness, noises in the head and all disagreeable discharges from the ear speedily and permanently removed, without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed where malformation does not exist.

Twenty-three years' close and undivided attention to this branch of special practice has enabled him to refuse his treatment to such a degree of success as to find the most confirmed and obstinate cases yield by a steady attention to the means prescribed.

References to many of the first families of this City, and physicians and surgeons throughout the United States.

No charge for consultation and examination. Receptions from 9 to 3 daily; Sundays until 12.

PAVEMENT SWINDLES.

How the Taxpayers are Plundered in the Matter of Wooden Pavements.

An illustration of one of the many rascally schemes by which the Ring enrichs itself by plundering our citizens is to be found in the narrative which is here given to the readers of this morning's TIMES. The facts cannot be contradicted, having been furnished by a gentleman of wealth, undoubted honor and eminent respectability. This gentleman was first applied to by one of the parties in the transaction for the necessary amount of money to carry it to a successful issue, and he refused, after becoming aware of its real nature, to have anything to do with the matter. New-York has been afflicted with all kinds of pavements, some of which, like the Flax position, proving to be such miserable nuisances as to necessitate their being taken up from the streets, and replaced by others less obnoxious. Everybody will recollect how soon the tar position, after it had been plastered over many of the stone pavements in the City was torn up, and carted away at a great expense to the City. Three hundred thousand dollars were made out of the position laid on Fifth-avenue, and the unfortunate property-holders on that thoroughfare were obliged to foot the bill. When the Nicolson pavement was laid in Mercer-street a few years ago, and proved a serious nuisance, the City was overstocked with contractors for wooden pavements, and competition has been so great ever since that where it might be practicable to lay such pavements in thoroughfares not too much traveled, an honest City Government could have had the work done at a reasonable price. But such is not the case, the citizens of New-York being obliged to pay more than double what the work could be done for. To obtain a contract to lay a pavement in the City, it is necessary to have a bill passed through the Common Council and signed by the Mayor, or passed over his veto.

Some contractors who had a patent wooden pavement for which they wished to get the job of laying in the City, made an application a short time ago to the authorities to obtain their consent. Getting at first but little encouragement, they finally obtained an audience with an Alderman, who informed them that he was the chief of the Ring in the Common Council. He said that he could secure them a contract, and carry through the bill over Mayor HALL's veto. The contractors were asked how much per cubic yard they would contract to lay the payment for. The answer was $3 50. "How many yards do you want?" was then asked. The contractors hesitating, the Alderman told them that they could have 1,000,000 yards if they so desired, and would agree to his propositions. "First," said he, "you must charge $6 50 per yard, out of which you will take your $3 50, and give to us the added $3, to be divided among us for getting you the contract. How many yards do you want?" The contractors replied that they did not care to take a larger contract than for 120,000 cubic yards. "Then," said the Alderman, "You must first deposit $120,000 in bank, and give us a check for the amount, payable upon the bill becoming a law, and we will guarantee to make it such. The other $120,000, to be divided among soldiers, you can pay to us afterward; but we can do nothing with you until you have given us a check for the $120,000 placed in bank, and we will then secure you the contract, as we have said, and your money, over Controller CORNOLLY's veto." The contractors, who were well pleased with the probability of getting a contract in which they would be allowed $6 50 per cubic yard, making at this rate a profit of 100 per cent, made a vigorous effort to get the required amount for deposit, not having themselves that sum of money. It was finally raised and deposited in bank. Before giving the check into the hands of the Alderman, it was discovered that "Boss" TWEED, as Commissioner of Public Works, would have something to say before the contractors could get their money, and the Alderman was asked by the contractors what security they were to have against the private notes of Mr. TWEED. "Oh," said the Alderman, "you must make your own arrangements with TWEED. Contractors always make their private arrangements with TWEED." "Well," said the contractor, "unless you agree to settle everything with TWEED as well as myself, I will not deal for I understand that we will also be obliged to come down handsomely to him or he will interfere. The contractors having been informed that they would have to pay TWEED at least two, see before they could get their money, decided to have anything to do with a contract that did not promise a big result, as they at first imagined. In this way are all contracts made for wooden pavements, the City authorities receiving at least fifty per cent. out of the job.

The Nicolson pavement can be laid for $3 per cubic yard and yield a handsome profit, after the royalty of twenty-five cents is paid to the owners of the patent right.

An old contractor, who has the means at command to do so, says that he will pave every street in New-York with wooden pavements, for $3 per yard, and that if the City would do the work, employing competent persons to superintend it, it could lay the pavement for $2 50 per cubic yard. It will be remembered that the money to pay for the pavements does not come out of the Treasury, but is raised by assessment on those living along the line of improvement.

Stockholders' Stock Transfers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Before the closing of the transfer-books of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company yesterday, a very large amount of the stock was registered in the name of one HENRY SMITH. Can you inform the public if this is Mr. HANK SMITH, of Ring notoriety, and whether his interest also represents that of his political financial associates, who are well known to have been largely interested in this stock? It may be well too to inform the depositors and stockholders of the Tenth National Bank that some 1,300 shares of the preferred stock of the above-named railroad corporation was yesterday placed in the name of W. B. FARNUM, Cashier.

Where are the Old City Records?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In reading your paper of today, and on seeing that the notorious New-York Printing Company is being looked up by the Committee of Seventy, it strikes me there is a circumstance in connection with that Company not generally known. Are you or are your readers aware that all the old historical records of the City of New-York were some time ago removed from the City Hall to the cellars of the aforesaid Company? Perhaps, as BILL TWEED has turned over his interest in the New-York Printing Company to his son, there may be some difficulty in getting them back. Any how, these old papers are of sufficient interest to every intelligent citizen to make it worth while to try. HISTORICUS.

Another Odell.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A paragraph appeared in your issue of Oct. 4, under the head of "The Iniquitous Ring," which states that "GEORGE ODELL receives $2,000 per year as Second Clerk to Superintendent of Street Improvements," and also that he "keeps a large livery-stable on Lexington-avenue, and other statements not very flattering to the party named. This may be all true in the main, but there is one error which nearly concerns us which we wish you would correct. There is no such person as "GEORGE ODELL" keeping a livery-stable on Lexington-avenue, but quite recently we would like it to be distinctly understood that neither of our names is "GEORGE ODELL," and that we are not, either of us, the person alluded to in the paragraph, nor do we know anything about him or of his existence.

What Becomes of the Money?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Last year an amendment to the Code of Procedure was passed empowering the Justices of the several District Courts of this City to appoint stenographers at a salary of $2,000 a year, and the Clerks of these Courts were directed to collect, in addition to the usual fees, the sum of $5 in all cases in which a trial is had.

Since the passage of this amendment one part of it has been strictly carried out—that is the $5 has been exacted, but as yet I have seen no stenographers, except in Judge QUINN's Court, and if he receives $2,000 a year for what he does, I can only say, in the slang of the day, "He's got a soft thing." There is no doubt this Kickover for stenographers is a big thing, and the cause of paying them $2,000 per year is simply preposterous, as there is really nothing for them to do, and suitors are obliged to pay for what they get now to obtain judgment in the Marine Court, Courts that it does not in the Marine Court, or even in the Supreme Court, in the Court of Appeals. Could you manage to find out what has become of that $5 extra? You have unraveled some well-kept secrets, and I am sure the profession would thank you. It must amount to many thousands yearly, and the amendment requires the fees to be paid into the City Treasury. Are they?

Judgments Against the City.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your report of payments by the City appears, if not mistaken, $1,200,000 for judgment against the City.

It might be worth while to have them examined.

What for?
If obtained by confession or default?
In whose favor?
Who received the money?

The City Law Department may need an examination as well as the others.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Campaign in the State—What the Republicans Have to Do and Are Doing.

The Republicans of New-Jersey are actively at work and mean to retain possession of the State, the political control of which they obtained last Fall. Aside from the office of Governor there are other important matters at stake—the redistricting of the State for one or more additional Congressmen, one certainly, and perhaps two or three; the appointment of a Chancellor to succeed Mr. RUDERMAN; of a Clerk and all the Republican Judges of the Supreme Court, and of all Gov. WARD's appointees of Prosecutors in the several counties. The Republicans of the State also desire to show that New-Jersey heartily and thoroughly sustains the National Administration, and will next year be found in the ranks of those States whose electoral vote will be cast for the Republican President, and also that it emphatically repudiates the corruptions and rascalities of the Tammany Ring, which has controlled the Democratic Party throughout the country. The Republican State Executive Committee has formally organized, with Hon. GEO. A. HALSEY, of Newark, as Chairman; C. ADOLPHUS SMITH, of Plainfield, as Secretary; and State Treasurer SOMY as Treasurer, and opened a head-quarters at Room No. 23 Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, which will be kept constantly open during the campaign to supply speakers and documents. The Committee is earnestly at work, and has appointed Gen. VAN BUREN, of Bergen County, to take charge of the speakers. Among gentlemen invited to take part in the canvass of the State are Secretary Robeson, Gen. Garfield and Judge Bingham, of Ohio; Speaker Blaine and Judge Hale, of Maine; Senator Wilson and Congressman Dawes, of Massachusetts; John W. Forney and Judge Kelley, of Pennsylvania, and others; while of home talent, Senator Frelinghuysen, Gen. Kilpatrick, Major Pangborn, Cortlandt Parker, A. S. Kenseby, John Hill, John Davidson, and others, are already actively engaged. The canvass promises to be one of the most effective ever made in the State. Since the nomination of Mr. WALSH, large and enthusiastic ratification-meetings have been held at Jersey City, Newark, Paterson, Elizabeth, Rahway, Plainfield, Orange and New-Brunswick, in this section of the State, and arrangements have been made for meetings at Trenton, Bridgeton, Camden and other cities in the lower part of the State. Mr. WALSH has visited the State and various county fairs, and the several local conventions, and has made many friends, and would today poll over a thousand more votes than he would have received the day after his nomination. The Republicans are also supporting him by making strong nominations for the local offices. In Atlantic County Hon. WILLIAM MOORE, member of Congress for the past two terms, is nominated for Senator, and Bergen County presents Mr. HOWLAND, a well-known New-York merchant. In Cumberland a division between rival candidates was settled by the nomination of a third man, who is acceptable to both wings. The other counties promise to present equally available and popular candidates, who will not only command the full party strength but add to it that of Mr. WALSH. The Opening struggle will take place in Newark, which holds its municipal election next Tuesday, the 10th, for a Mayor and other city officers. Last year the Democracy, who had held power for a twelvemonth, were so extravagant and reckless, having run the city into debt over $140,000 in nine months, that they were emphatically repudiated, the Republicans electing their ticket by over 2,500 majority, and twelve of the thirteen Councilmen, a victory which they supplemented in November by giving Hon. GEO. A. HALSEY for Congress over 5,200 majority. This year the Democracy have been more careful and their nominations are of a more respectable character. The Republicans have renominated Mayor RICORD, who was elected in 1869 by 282 majority, and the Democrats present Ex-Mayor MORIS BIGELOW, who held the office for seven successive years, from 1857 to 1864, and was beaten in 1867 by Ex-Mayor PRIDDY. Mr. BIGELOW is regarded as one of the strongest men, and will command his full party strength. The Republicans count on from 1,500 to 2,000 majority, and will elect twenty-three of the twenty Councilmen. A sweeping Republican victory in Newark in October over a strong Democratic nomination will encourage the party throughout the State, and be an indication of the result of the more important struggle in November.

An Accident Walks a Mile Through the Air.

A letter to the Cincinnati Gazette has the following account of a terrible tragedy mentioned already in our telegraphic columns:

Prof. WILBUR was engaged by the Orange County (Ind.) Fair to make an ascension in his hot-air balloon each day of the Fair. On each ascension but the last he had check ropes attached, to allow the ballon to go no higher than he desired; but on Saturday evening, Sept. 30, the closing day of the Fair, he detached the lines to allow the aerial ship to take him wherever it would. Mr. KNAPP, the editor of the Orange County Union, had arranged to make an ascension with Prof. WILBUR. After inflating the balloon to its utmost capacity, Mr. KNAPP stepped into the car. The Professor had held of the rope which attached the car to the balloon, and gave the word to "let go." From some cause he failed to reach the car in time. As the car began to rise Prof. WILBUR kept hold of the rope, and attempted to get in. He encountered in getting his elbow over and inside the edge of the basket, his body outside and feet dangling in the air, and in this perilous position started up. When about fifteen or twenty feet from the ground, the car came in contact with one of the ropes that held the balloon while being inflated, and threw Mr. KNAPP out, who fell to the ground, sustaining considerable injury. The balloon being lightened of part of the weight, shot upward almost with the speed of an arrow. Prof. WILBUR, still clinging to the basket and endeavoring to gain the car, ascended to the height of about one mile, as near as could be guessed, and when at that altitude the spectators were horror-stricken to see him loose his hold and fall to the earth.

It was truly a heart-rending spectacle, and one which we may hope to never see again. Men and women shouting, shrieking, screaming and falling upon their knees, and in the anguish of their hearts imploring heaven to protect him. But prayers and sympathy were unavailing. The Professor was seen high up in the air with feet down, arms and legs extended, his body in a circular motion descending at a fearful speed. He was about one minute in falling, and struck the earth with his head first, bursting it open. The sound of the fall was heard by the citizens of Paoli a half mile from the place. His hat, which came off a few seconds before he started, fell within four feet of him shortly after he reached the ground, he having passed it about midway down. The balloon rose to an immense height, and taking a north-westerly direction, landed some three miles from the scene of the disaster. His body was taken to the Albert House, in Paoli, and cared for by his wife, who witnessed the terrible tragedy.

Serious Bridge Accident in the Indian Territory.

"The American Bridge Company, of Chicago, Mr. L. C. HAVINGTON, Superintendent, is engaged in putting up a bridge across the Verdigris, a short distance south of Fort Gibson, for the M., K. and T. Railroad Company. The bridge that they are building is 300 feet long, and consists of three spans. The first span is 100 feet long, the second span 200 feet long, and the third 100 feet long. At 5 o'clock on the evening of the 1st, the workmen, about twenty-eight in number, had completed the first span, and were engaged in putting up the second span of 200 feet, when, without any warning, the span that they were at work on fell, carrying with it the twenty-eight men, wounding eighteen and two missing. Of the eighteen wounded, eight are supposed to be fatally injured. The work of the bridge was about thirty-five feet above the water, and the water is eighteen feet deep. The bridge is mostly in the river. Manager STEVENS, of the M., K. and T. Railroad, hearing of the accident by telegraph, immediately ordered a special train from Fort Scott to take all that were in condition to be removed, and returning took physicians and nurses to the scene of the disaster for those that were unable to be transported to Fort Scott. The men at work on the bridge were mostly from Toledo, and the balance from Fort Scott, Ottawa, Kansas and Leavenworth. Four have been found dead in the river, and another has died from his wounds."

CHINAMEN IN LOUISIANA.

An Unfavorable Report of the Results of the Experiment.

The editor of the Louisiana Planters' Banner, in a letter to his paper, written on the 15th ult., speaks as follows, perhaps from a prejudiced stand-point, of the results of the attempt to introduce Chinese labor:

"A week ago we visited the Millaudon plantation, a short distance above Gretna, on the west side of the Mississippi. This estate, as we have stated heretofore, is the property of ABNER B. MERRILL, Esq., of Boston, Mass. Last year Mr. MERRILL brought to his plantation (about 140 Chinamen, from California, at an expense of more than $12,000. Mr. KINGSLEY, the plantation agent, gave us an interesting account of the working and other qualities of these Chinese, to which we listened with pleasure. The whole company of Chinamen were quartered by themselves in the two-story brick refitting-house connected with the large distillery on the plantation. They had been on the plantation but a few weeks when CUM WING, or KIM WING, as he sometimes writes his name, who brought them from California, visited the plantation. He was a wealthy Chinese merchant and labor agent, connected with a Chinese house in California, and with another in China. Soon after he made his appearance on the plantation, the Chinamen 'went for him' in a body. They carried him to their quarters, divested him of all his clothes except his breeches, and took his boots. They bid defiance to the overseer, the agent, the proprietor, Mr. MERRILL, and all others. They declared, we think, late in the evening, Mr. KINGSLEY at once went to the city and brought a Police force to quiet these 'humble and obedient laborers' from the Celestial Kingdom. The Chinamen were in bed when the Police force arrived, and each had a candle burning at his window. Each one had been beaten and roughed up with the arrest and detention of CUM WING. The Police took CUM WING to the residence of Mr. MERRILL, and about fifteen pistols, supposed to be ringleaders, were taken to the negro quarters. The rest of the Chinamen, about 125, were detained as prisoners in the upper story of their quarters, the guard standing at the door of the lower story to prevent egress.

At about 4 o'clock in the morning the guards heard a disturbance in the rear of the house, and soon learned that about sixty Chinamen had dropped one by one from the second-story windows of their quarters, and were armed with clubs and missiles, and, furious and resolute, were preparing to rescue their leaders, who were under arrest at the negro quarters, and to recapture CUM WING. The Police immediately rallied, most of them Irishmen, armed with clubs and six-shooters. Mr. LINGSLEY requested them not to shoot, but to handle the yellow rebels as roughly as they pleased. The fray commenced in a most lively manner. The pistols were no match for the Police, who knocked down the Chinamen and kicked them, tumbled them right and left. It being a night fight, the fray was exciting in the extreme, and the whole plantation, where either black, white or yellow people were found, was in a white heat excitement. The Chinamen were promptly subdued, and again put under guard in their quarters. Some months after the above period the Chinamen of the Millaudon plantation became sullen, and gave the overseer, Mr. WHITE, some trouble. One day he pushed one of them one side as he stood in his way, and the Chinaman struck him. Mr. WHITE drew his six-shooter, shot him through the arm, and wounded his body. This roused every Chinaman on the place, for whom, either overseer or other white people, insults the whole gang with which he is associated. The overseer fled to the house, and the infuriated celestials sent for a gang of their countrymen, about thirty in number, who were working in another part of the plantation. As soon as these arrived they all armed themselves with cane-knives, sickles, clubs and sheath-knives, and marched on the dwelling-house of the proprietor of the plantation. There were no Police at hand to protect the white people, and their numbers were too small to protect themselves.

The celestials furiously demanded WHITE, the overseer. They were terribly in earnest. Nothing but the blood of WHITE would appease their wrath and satisfy their fiendish revenge. The only way to save the life of Mr. WHITE and quiet those yellow fiends. So, while Mr. MERRILL and others were pretending to inquire into the matter, and were delaying their attack upon the house and the murder of the overseer, Mr. WHITE made his escape in the direction of Gretna, and they persuaded the infuriated laborers that he had been arrested by the Police and would be tried and hanged. This satisfied them, and they retired to their quarters.

Mr. KINGSLEY says he found his Chinese laborers unfaithful, and that they cared not a straw whether they did their work or not, provided they got their pay. They were slow, not strong or able-bodied, and as fond of ease and idleness as any beings on earth, when they can get enough ahead to enable them to get along without work. The agent found them very ordinary hands about the plantation, and they gave him much trouble in putting one on the drier as they were ordered to do it.

In the field they had to be watched, and forced to work, or they would have been nearly worthless. They frequently were stubborn, and delayed work, hailing their teams at places that would compel other teams to halt and lose time. The reason obtuse, Mr. KINGSLEY thinks, is to get all they can out of their employer, and give him as little in return. He says they are the keenest cheats in the world, and cunning in making bargains and in obtaining advantages. He says that they object to being docked when idle or sick, but unanimously demand all of their wages, whether they earn them or not; that they are utterly destitute of moral honesty, and have not the least sense of justice in their natures.

A well-informed Chinaman from California visited the plantation some months since, and told the agent that they did not know how to get work out of Chinese laborers. He told Mr. KINGSLEY that they fed them too high, and didn't beat them enough. He told them to beat them like dogs, and they would do much better.

Out of 141 Chinamen brought to the Millaudon plantation, there are now but twenty-five remaining on the place, and Mr. KINGSLEY says he will give them $5 apiece to run away. Fifty-one of the original lot went to work for Mr. JAMES, at the penitentiary, in Baton Rouge, twenty-six went to work for Col. ROMAIN, on the coast, and more than forty ran off. Mr. KINGSLEY says they are fond of changing about, run away worse than negroes, and if they hire at a stipulated price they will leave as soon as anybody offers them better pay. Col. JAMES employed 151 Chinamen at the Penitentiary, and has discharged them all in disgust. Col. ROMAIN's have all run away. Mr. AGNAR, six miles above Plaquemine, employed fifty Chinese. They have all run away. Mr. DAVIDSON employs a large number below New-Orleans, and they have given him a great deal of trouble, and we learn he is much dissatisfied with them. Mr. STACKHOUSE pays $26 a month in gold to fifty or sixty Chinamen. We learn that he is dissatisfied with them. Mr. KERNOCHAN, below New-Orleans, has thirty Chinamen. They work very well for him. He has had a terrible row with them, and whipped the head Chinese manager and interpreter when they first commenced work on the plantation, (tied him down and whipped him,) and soon after the Celestial manager ran away; the gang were terribly afraid of the big white overseer, who kicked and cuffed them about as though they were dogs, and they are doing pretty well. ED. J. GAY, Esq., worked fifty-three Chinamen on his plantation near Plaquemine. They all ran away. Mr. KINGSLEY says the Chinamen and negroes seem very friendly, and have no trouble in their intercourse with each other, but they do not live together in the same quarters. Mr. KINGSLEY is of the opinion that the mass between CUM WING and the Chinamen on the Millaudon plantation was the result of a premeditated plan between CUM and the laborers, to obtain more satisfactory terms from Mr. MERRILL; that they are crafty enough for any such tricks, and the whole affair looked to him like 'a put up job,' though Mr. MERRILL does not think so."

The Organization of the Tennessee Legislature.

Alluding to the organization of the new Senate of Tennessee, the Knoxville Chronicle says:

"There are a large number of Conservative Union men in East Tennessee who have acted with the Democratic Party, believing it to be conservative and kindly disposed to those who co-operated with them. We hope all such will not fail to observe that, in the organization of the Legislature, their representative candidate, Dr. W. R. SEVIER, of Jonesboro', was shoved aside for that more worthy representative of Tennessee Democracy, Gen. JOHN C. VAUGHN, of Monroe County. There is no comparison between the two men as to their fitness for the place, but Gen. VAUGHN wore a rebel uniform during the war, while Dr. SEVIER sympathized with the Government, and the former was therefore the favorite. Any one who knows the two men will be able to say much for the sense and judgment of a Senate that would prefer VAUGHN to SEVIER."

Impressive Baptismal Service in Boston.

The rite of baptism was solemnized by Rev. E. E. HALE at the residence of one of his parishioners at the South End, Boston, on Sunday evening. The following particulars are obtained from the Transcript:

"A large number of the relatives and friends of the family were present, including the grandparents of the child christened, it being the first anniversary after their golden wedding, which occurred on the 2d of October, 1870. The baptismal water used on the occasion was the same the mother of the infant was christened with some thirty years ago by Rev. Dr. ALEXANDER YOUNG. The child was named Mary Sy Hanna, a name borne from ancestry for five successive generations, by an ancient family of Scotch descent. The water was brought from Palestine in a very choicest exotics, artistically combined, in elaborate wreaths, baskets and other forms. Mr. HALE [illegible] Messrs. [illegible] assisting. It was a scene of the profoundest interest, [illegible] a public, it was a gem in the social [illegible] was one of pleasure and delight to [illegible] present. They retired with the best wishes for the parents and the little one, who is the 'Sy Barbe' of the present generation."

THE NORTH CAROLINA OUTLAWS

Lowry and His Gang—The Authorities Defied—Peasants by the Soldiers.

The wild deeds of the Robeson County gang of outlaws, in the eastern section of North Carolina, have often been spoken of. The men have for several years past defied all law and authority. A correspondent of the Washington Chronicle gives the following story of their misdeeds:

"During the war, in 1863, ALLEN LOWRRY, said to be a full-blooded Indian, residing in the little village of Scuffletown, had a son of his were murdered by Confederate troops, the charge being that of harboring rebel deserters and Federal soldiers.

LOWRRY's wife was a bright mulatto woman, by whom he had eight sons. One of these, HENRY BERRY LOWRRY, though but fifteen years of age when his father was shot, swore he would avenge the death of parent and brother. HENRY was charged soon after with killing a man named BARNES, for which he was tried and sentenced to be hanged. He broke out of jail, but was subsequently arrested and lodged in irons in the prison at Whiteville, Columbus County. From this he effected his escape also and fled to the woods, where he has remained till the present day.

A year after the surrender a party of disguised men killed Sheriff KING, of Lumberton, and robbed him of a large sum of money. LOWRRY and several former associates were suspected of the crime. Some of those suspected were caught and hung by a mob; others fled to the woods and joined LOWRRY to avoid punishment. The band now consists of Henry Berry Lowrry the leader; Stephen L. Lowrry, Thomas Lowrry, Bess Strong, Andrew Strong, and George Applewaite and two or three others. Several efforts have been made to capture them, but have proved ineffectual. A number of persons engaged in hunting the outlaws have been shot, and a terrible state of affairs exists in the county by reason of their depredations. In the Spring of last year a company of militia surrounded the gang near Scuffletown, and found all drunk but LOWRRY and APPLEWAITE. The company fired upon them, and APPLEWAITE was wounded and fell. LOWRRY roused his men, returned the fire with his right arm, and bore APPLEWAITE, the wounded man, off on his left, and they all escaped.

LOWRRY, it is said, wears a belt with several knives and pistols, carries a double-barrel gun on each side, and a carbine that shoots sixteen balls, in his hand. His men are all armed well, and provided with a supply of ammunition.

Scuffletown is an old settlement of Indians and free negroes. The population of ten miles square exceeds 4,000 people. It is thought that many of the residents are in sympathy with the outlaws, and lend them assistance and provide food and ammunition. The majority of these people, however, it is stated, are as anxious to effect the capture of these desperadoes as the community generally can be.

The summer before the authorities of Robeson County, suspecting that the relatives of the gang were harboring them, and knew of their whereabouts, arrested the wife and children of LOWRRY, and proceeded to Lumberton. On the way the outlaws fired upon the Sheriff's posse, killing three and wounding others severely. Failing to effect the release of his family, LOWRRY sent a message to Lumberton, stating that he would give the Sheriff till ten o'clock the following day to release them, and if this was not done he would drench the county in blood. The order was obeyed by the authorities, and the women and children returned to Scuffletown.

The next outrage committed by LOWRRY was the burning of Mr. MILLAUDON's barn a few weeks ago. The band has perpetrated several depredations of late, and damn and defy the authorities. These desperadoes are determined never to be taken alive by the authorities. LOWRRY, it is said, swears he will spill his blood near or upon the spot his father shed his own. They prowl about the country, often in open day, and prey upon the people. Many citizens of Robeson are seen and conversed with LOWRRY and other members of his gang, and they have often stalked up to a farm-house and demanded a breakfast, dinner or supper, and the demand is generally granted. LOWRRY says all he asks is to be let alone—he knows he will be shot or hung if caught—and he will harm no one that does not harm him or his associates.

Members of both political parties are active in leaving the authorities assistance to capture the band.

Adjt.-Gen. GARMAN, of this State, is now in Robeson County, and has a detachment of United States soldiers, with a company of militia, engaged in hunting the gang. It is hardly probable that they can be captured until Winter, and then not until they are frozen, starved, or driven out of that section of the country."

An Atrocious Murder by the Ku-Klux in Louisiana—A New-York Man Killed.

The New-Orleans Republican publishes the letter given below from Hon. W. B. PHILLIPS, Parish Judge of Grant Parish, a parish created two or three years ago from a portion of Rapides and other territory. Mr. WHITE went to New-Orleans with the Eighteenth New-York Regiment of Cavalry. He was a nephew of KENNETH G. WHITE, of this City, Clerk of the United States Circuit Court, and a son of JOSEPH L. WHITE, formerly member of Congress from Indiana, who was shot in Nicaragua by an intoxicated man in January, 1861:

COLFAX, Sept. 27, 1871.

Editor Republican:

Your imagination cannot conceive of a more heinous crime than was committed here on the night of the 25th inst. A crowd of white men, about fifty, came to my home about 1 o'clock, and fired in my dwelling-house, and guarded the doors with double-barreled shot-guns; and when DELOS W. WHITE, our Recorder, and myself went to the door, they fired upon us, killing WHITE in an instant. They took two more men at near my house, and left them as dead, and then they mounted their horses and ran off. They burned everything I had entirely up, and left a torch tied on the end of a pole twelve feet long in the yard. It will be impossible for me to stay in this part of the State until the general election is over. Mr. WHITE was burned up in the house. I could not get him out. The people are much excited. I am not in condition to write more. W. B. PHILLIPS.

Another Slander Against Mrs. Wharton Disposed Of.

The following letter is published in the Baltimore papers of Thursday:

LEXINGTON, Sept. 19, 1871.

To L. North Steele, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I have received from friends in Baltimore newspapers clippings relative to myself so entirely false and prejudicial to my friend, Mrs. WHARTON, that I conceive it my duty to write to you on the subject. The papers state that I was "nearly ill by my cheek soup, brought by Mrs. WHARTON's servant, who begged me not to eat it," &c. The facts are these: I had been ill, for some days, but was getting better, and hearing Mrs. WHARTON had a new receipt for a chicken soup, which she thought would arouse the death of parent and brother. HENRY was charged soon after with killing a man named BARNES, for which he was tried and sentenced to be hanged. He broke out of jail, but was subsequently arrested and lodged in irons in the prison at Whiteville, Columbus County. A Pretended Nephew of Robert E. Lee Flourishes for a Season in Tennessee.

The Nashville Banner says that several months since one Capt. S. ADAMS LEE introduced himself to the citizens of Murfreesboro and vicinity as a cousin of the lamented Gen. R. E. LEE, and as Captain of the Merrimac in the late war. He had but one leg, and this, coupled with the delivery of several lectures ostensibly in behalf of the Lee Memorial Fund, added to his popularity, and he was elected Professor in Soule College, received a license to preach, and became a great man. Soon afterward he made some remarks on the cars derogatory to the character of the ladies and citizens in general of Murfreesboro. Mr. R. G. BUDD and Rev. Dr. HALBELL having heard and repeated the remarks of Capt. LEE, he was called upon to explain them and exculpate himself. He wrote to "his cousin," Gen. G. W. C. LEE, to testify as to his character, &c., &c. At the same time he denied having made the statements reported by Mr. BUDD and Dr. HALBELL, whereupon Mr. BUDD wrote to Gen. FITZHUGH LEE, to see who the Captain was. In reply to Mr. BUDD's letter, the following was received from Gen. FITZHUGH LEE:

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 19, 1871.

Mr. R. G. Budd:

MY DEAR SIR: Your note followed me from Lexington to this place, and was only received yesterday. I have to reply that we have no one in our family named S. ADAMS LEE, nor have heard of such a person before. Yours, respectfully, FITZHUGH LEE.

About the same time, Rev. Dr. MOORE, of Soule College, received the following, which purported to be from Gen. G. W. C. LEE, strongly indorsing him as a generous, brave, high-toned man, incapable of a mean action, whom he had known from boyhood. A letter was thereupon sent to the President of the Washington-Lee College, and the following reply received:

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 26, 1871.

Rev. N. Henderson, Esq., Editor Murfreesboro News:

DEAR SIR: Your note of the 23d inst., inclosing copy of two letters in reference to "Capt. S. ADAMS LEE," was received this morning. The letter of the 16th inst. to Rev. Dr. MOORE, signed G. W. C. LEE, was written by my father, who is now in Kentucky. Enclosed you will find the letter to Dr. MOORE, which explains itself.

Very respectfully and truly, G. W. C. LEE.

Of course Capt. S. ADAMS LEE has abandoned his close in the Soule College, and sought new fields.

SHERIDAN'S BUFFALO HUNT.

Return with His Party to Chicago Laden with Spoils of the Chase—Buffalo, Elk and Antelope, Deer, Coyotes and Wild Turkeys.

Gen. SHERIDAN and party reached Chicago in return from a very successful buffalo hunt on the Western plains, on Wednesday morning, in the health and spirits. Some incidents of the trip are thus given by the Chicago Evening Journal:

"The party left Chicago on the 20th ultimo, by the Chicago and North-western Road, Jonathan C. GAULT, Esq., Superintendent, tendering the Director's car to the General for his party. At Omaha a like courtesy was shown by Mr. SICKLES, Superintendent of the Union Pacific, and L. M. BENNETT, Superintendent of the Pullman Car Company on that road. The trip was most delightful. On arriving at North Platte, Major-Gen. EMORY and Major J. H. BROWN, the commanders of the expedition, met the party, which was escorted by them to Fort McPherson, a pleasant ride of seventeen miles over the plains. About two miles from the post several Indian chiefs, accompanied by mounted men, were drawn up, and received Gen. SHERIDAN, and were reviewed by him, after which the party were presented to the officers of the post and their ladies, who also had come out in carriages and on horseback. The party were escorted to Camp Rucker, where quarters were assigned, and the day spent in choosing horses, target practice, &c., concluding with a grand hop at the post.

At 5 o'clock next morning tents were struck, and the grand march began. Lieut. E. M. HAYES, Quartermaster, and "Buffalo Bill," the observed of all observers," splendid in form, the beau ideal of the rough rider that he is—as scout and guide. The advance was led by Gen. SHERIDAN and Major BROWN; eighty-five mounted men, fourteen wagons, three ambulances, and led horses for the party, constituted the outfit. Twelves miles out leave was taken of the ladies and officers who thus far accompanied the party, and the first camp was reached on Plum Creek, eighteen miles, which, in honor of the commander, was named "Camp Brown, my Boy."

The march was commenced for the grand hunt at an early hour next morning. A cup was voted to the slayer of the first buffalo, and one also for the first elk. About ten miles out, seven buffalo were seen on a distant hill; the command was halted, and seven "solitary horsemen might have been seen," led by "Buffalo Bill, and all eager for the chase. Gen. SHERIDAN secured the first tongue and brush, and became winner of the cup. CROSBY made a good second, and LIVINGSTON third, while JEROME, the younger, brought in the trophies from the fourth. Camp was reached at about 2 o'clock, which, in honor of one of the most gallant soldiers in the country, was named "Camp Sheridan." Before the camp-fires were lighted, WILSON brought in an elk of about 600 pounds avoirdupois, and became the winner of the cup.

The next was a regular field-day. The party camped on the Beaver, and "Camp Cody," named in honor of Buffalo Bill, was filled with trophies taken from forty buffalo. Gen. SCHOFIELD brought in a wagon, LAWRENCE JEROME four, and every one of the party two or three. All having now killed buffaloes, but little interest was taken in the numerous herds seen on the adjacent hillsides, except to secure enough for use in the camp.

Elk, antelope, black-tailed deer, coyotes, jack rabbits, skunks, prairie dogs, prairie dogs, rattlesnakes, wild turkeys, mallard, teal and wood-duck, and three or four kinds of fish, embraced the game found and secured—FITZHUGH shooting the first buffalo, WILSON the first elk, CROSBY the first antelope, RUCKER the first coyote, SHERIDAN the first rabb

FINANCIAL.

First Mortgage, Convertible, 7 Per Cent. Gold Bonds

OF THE

PEORIA & ROCK ISLAND RAILWAY

OF ILLINOIS.

First Mortgage Bonds - - - $1,500,000
Capital Stock - - - - - - - 2,000,000

[illegible] COMPLETED Road 81 miles in length, connecting the important Cities of Peoria on the Illinois River, and Rock Island, Moline and Davenport, on the Mississippi. Davenport, on the opposite bank of the river, is connected by a railway bridge. The last rail of this road was laid July 7, 1871, and the line is now open and being operated with a success exceeding all anticipation. In order to place upon the road the large equipment necessary for the business offered, and to construct depots, car and engine-houses, machine-shops, &c., equal to any of the best old roads in the country, as is now required of this, the Company offer, through the undersigned, $1,500,000 convertible First mortgage gold bonds, which cover the entire property of the Company, and in less than $12,000 per mile. PRESENT PRICE, 90, AND ACCRUED INTEREST IN CURRENCY. Principal and interest payable in coin at New-York or London, free of tax. Coupons payable February and Aug. 1.

This road opened for the immediate local as well as through traffic, now offered, will prove one of the most profitable in the West, traversing as it does a section of country unsurpassed in fertility of soil and agricultural resources, already thickly populated, and in a high state of cultivation. This is self-evident from the fact that every section of the road passes through cultivated fields and many flourishing towns and villages, with a large city and navigable river at each end. Railroads in the West have been heretofore constructed through unsettled and uncultivated regions of the country, consequently have had but little local traffic to depend upon for several years after construction. But the Peoria and Rock Island Railway is a first class COMPLETED road, with NO PARALLEL or COMPETING LINE, and RUNS THROUGH ONE OF THE RICHEST AGRICULTURAL, MANUFACTURING AND MOST POPULOUS DISTRICTS IN THE WEST. Thus it is certain that the local business is already more than enough to sustain the road, while the through traffic is unlimited, as its connections are numerous, which can be seen by a glance at the map.

This road is a grand central link, to which many of the principal lines centralize and diverge to all parts of the continent.

We invite the attention of investors to this loan. Being familiar with the wealth and resources of the country along the line of this railway and A MEMBER OF OUR FIRM HAVING MADE A CAREFUL EXAMINATION OF THE ROAD AND ITS PROPERTY, WE CAN WITH THE UTMOST CONFIDENCE RECOMMEND THE BONDS AS A PRIME SECURITY, reliable and safe in every particular.

All marketable securities received in exchange at full rates, and bonds delivered to all parts of the country, free of express charges.

Maps, circulars, &c., with full particulars relating to the road, furnished on application by the undersigned, Financial Agents of the Company.

$150,000 NEW-JERSEY INVESTMENT

VINELAND RAILWAY BONDS.

$6,000 per mile, Seven per Cent. free of tax; interest due April and October. Principal payable 1900.

The undersigned offers the unsold balance of the First and only Mortgage Bonds of the Vineland Railway Company, the entire Loan being $750,000.

The line begins at the terminus of the New-Jersey Southern Railroad, and extends to the Delaware River, in 47½ miles, and traverses the garden of New-Jersey—almost the entire length passing through a rich and cultivated country,—the products of which will be brought to Philadelphia and New-York by this line.

The flourishing towns of Vineland and Bridgeton are on the route.

On the opposite shore of the Delaware River the Smyrna Road is constructing, and will form a part of a through line to Baltimore.

Thirty-seven miles are now operated, and the remaining ten miles will be laid by Sept. 20.

The road-bed is not surpassed in the United States. Traffic constantly increasing.

The investment is secure beyond question. For a short time the price will be 85 and accrued interest.

OFFICE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, CLEVELAND, Sept. 16, 1871.

TO THE HOLDERS OF THE COMMON STOCK of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company:

Notice is hereby given, that this Company offers to the holders of the common stock of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company fourteen Millions of Dollars of the capital stock of said Company, issued in pursuance of the vote of the stockholders of this Company, taken under the provisions of the charter, at a meeting of the stockholders held at the City of Cleveland, Ohio, on the 27th day of July, 1871.

Each shareholder of the common stock will be entitled to forty per cent. of the par of the stock held by him, upon the payment of thirty-three and one-third per cent. of the par thereof, in the manner following, viz.: Ten per cent. of the par thereof on the 1st day of November next, the further sum of ten per cent. of the par thereof on the 1st day of December next and the residue of said thirty-three and one-third per cent. at such time as the same may be called.

Notice of the calls for installments payable subsequent to the 1st day of December next, will be given to the stockholders, by publication in a newspaper published in the City of Cleveland, Ohio, and also in a newspaper published in the City of New-York, at least thirty days before the day on which payment is required.

The whole of said residue will be called for on or before the 1st day of August, 1872.

No payment shall not be made in accordance with any calls which may be made, all rights to such stock shall cease, and the stock will be disposed of for the account and benefit of the Company.

Scrip certificates will be issued for the payments of the first installment (called for Nov. 1.) Payments of subsequent calls will, at the same are from time to time made, be stamped upon the scrip certificate.

The scrip certificates will be transferable on the books of the Company.

On payment of the thirty-three and one-third per cent. certificates for full-paid stock will be issued upon the surrender for cancellation of the scrip certificates.

Dividends, upon the sum of the installments actually paid in, will be declared, payable at the same rate and time as upon common stock.

Payments of the calls are to be made at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York, and a protestation of the stock certificates will be required, to the end that the issue of the scrip certificates may be stamped thereon.

The stock transfer-books will be opened on Monday, the 25th day of September inst., and will be closed on Saturday, the 7th day of October next.

CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS, CINCINNATI AND INDIANAPOLIS RAILWAY COMPANY, CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 26, 1871.

NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given to the stockholders of this Company that they will have the privilege of subscribing for new stock in the proportion of one share for every five, and one share for every fraction of five shares greater than one-half, as registered in their name Oct. 20, 1871, to be paid for at the rate of seventy-five cents on the dollar.

Subscriptions will be received, and the first installment of fifty per centum will be payable between the 1st day of November and 15th day of December, 1871. Second installment of fifty per centum will be payable on the 1st day of February, 1872, and if not paid on or before that date, the right to the stock subscribed for will cease.

If stockholders prefer, the whole amount can be paid at the time of subscription. Interest to Feb. 1, 1872, at the rate of seven per centum per annum, will be allowed upon the payments, at which time certificate of stock will be issued. This interest will be paid with the February dividend.

Stockholders registered in New-York will subscribe and pay at the office of the United States Trust Company, New-York; all others at the office of the Treasurer in Cleveland, Ohio.

No subscriptions will be received after Dec. 1, 1871.

The transfer-books will close Oct. 20, and reopen Nov 2, 1871.

By order of the Board of Directors.

OF THE SEVEN PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY,

Principal due 1st January, 1886, and coupons payable in New-York 1st January and 1st July.

These bonds are the only mortgage lien on the railway and rolling stock of the corporation, and are for less than $12,000 per mile.

The gross receipts of the Company for 1870 amounted to $1,401,240 33-100; operating expenses and renewals, $1,000,000 00-100, leaving a profit of $401,240 71, or $203,244 71 in excess of the annual interest on Seven per Cent. on $2,100,000 first mortgage bonds.

The South Carolina Railway is one of the earliest built railways in the United States; its affairs have ever been managed with care and integrity, and the present condition of the property is that of complete restoration. We recommend its mortgage bonds to investors, with the assurance of their being a first-class security.

The above are offered for sale by the undersigned at 87½ per cent.

NOTICE.

REDEMPTION OF 6-20 BONDS 1869.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Sept. 1, 1871.

By virtue of the authority given by an act of Congress approved July 14, 1870, entitled "An Act to authorize the refunding of the national debt," I hereby give notice that the principal and accrued interest of the bonds herein below designated, known as Five-twenty Bonds, will be paid at the Treasury of the United States, in the City of Washington, or at the office the 1st day of December next, and that the interest on said bonds will cease on that day. That is to say, Coupon Bonds known as the First Series, act of Feb. 25, 1862, (dated July 1, 1862,) numbered as follows:

1 to 10,000 inclusive, of $50 each.
1 to 43,572 inclusive, of 100 each.
1 to 40,011 inclusive, of 500 each.
1 to 10,000 inclusive, of 1,000 each.

And Registered Bonds of the same act,

1 to 505, inclusive, of $50 each.
1 to 4,103, inclusive, of 100 each.
1 to 1,096, inclusive, of 500 each.
1 to 2,000, inclusive, of 1,000 each.
1 to 2,000, inclusive, of 5,000 each.
1 to 2,000, inclusive, of 10,000 each.

The amount outstanding (embraced in the numbers as above) is one hundred million ($100,000,000) dollars.

Coupon Bonds of the act of Feb. 25, 1862, were issued in four distinct series. Bonds of the First Series (embracing those described above) do not bear the series designation upon them, while those of the Second, Third and Fourth Series are distinctly marked on the face of the bonds.

United States securities forwarded for redemption should be addressed to the "LOAN DIVISION," Secretary's Office.

First Mortgage Bonds

MOBILE & MONTGOMERY

RAILROAD COMPANY,

Indorsed by State of Alabama.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

After a careful examination, we confidently recommend these bonds, because—

1. They are a first mortgage upon a road already completed and in successful operation, with net earnings well established for several years, as MUCH MORE THAN ENOUGH TO PAY THE INTEREST on all the bonds authorized to be issued.

2. The proceeds of these bonds will complete an extension of fifteen miles of heavy work from Tensaw into the City of Mobile, DISPENSING WITH THE FREQUENT STEAM-BOAT SERVICE, CURTAILING EXPENSE AND INCREASING EFFICIENCY OF THE ROAD.

3. The road is 188 miles long. Entire mortgage, $16,000, or a little over $85 PER MILE; COST OF ROAD OVER $4000 PER MILE.

4. It connects MOBILE and MONTGOMERY, and is a link in the route from NEW-ORLEANS to NEW-YORK, and also between the GULF and LOUISVILLE, by the lines of the road from MONTGOMERY north to DECATUR, being built by the LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, who thus display their estimate of the value of the road.

5. They are indorsed and guaranteed by the STATE OF ALABAMA, the value of whose investments has been recently tested and fully established.

6. Some of the most careful investors in ENGLAND and this country, after investigation, have bought these bonds for permanent investment, so that now only about $150,000 are on the market, which are for sale at present at 85 and ACCRUED INTEREST, by
